SAY a good word for the Prohibition Amendment.

How many wives and children will be glad if the Constitutional Amendment is adopted!

THE best deed you can do this summer is to vote for the Prohibition Amendment on the 18th day of June.

WM. H. CAROTHERS, master mechanice of the Tyrone Division car shops, died suddenly in Tyrone on Sunday night.

LIVELY times in Oklahoma according to reports. There are six persons crowding in to every track of land in the territory.

DRUNKENNESS is the cause of three-fourths the crime, all of which can be stopped if the Prohibition Amendment is adopted.

WHAT is the fate of the passengers on the Danmark? As the days pass by it becomes more strange that nothing definite is heard from them.

PENNSYLVANIA is the richest state in the Union and the second in population. Make it the peer of any in morality by carrying the amendment.

A. W. EVERETT, the wealthy proprietor of a large stock farm in Manitoba, is taking a party to the Polar regions with the expectation of going around Cape Barron, a feat but seldom performed.

DURING this entire campaign we have not seen or heard of one reason why the Prohibition Constitutional Amendment should not be adopted. Cannot some of our readers who oppose it give their reasons why?

WHAT if Massachusetts did vote against the Amendment? That should inspire Pennsylvanians to vote for it and thus take a step which will make the Keystone State prominent in morality as it is in wealth.

THE people of Patrick county, Va., are badly in need of help, having lost everything they had by the recent sweeping forest fires in that section. They have appealed to the country for aid, and the appeal should meet with a prompt and hearty response.

IT seems to us that every man should vote for Prohibition. It will make the people richer and more prosperous, by putting into the channels of beneficial trade money which is now spent without procuring an equivalent; it will prevent the increase of poverty, crime and insanity and thus save money which would otherwise be spent in taking care of the victims of drink.

"PIGS in clover," the puzzle which is having such a run, has become a greater craze than the famous "fifteen" puzzle. There are now being turned out 300 gross a day, and the demand cannot be supplied. Over 500,000 have been sold by the owners and as many more by other makers. The best selling toy ever put on the market was a German invention, a tin crawling turtle, and 3,000,000 were sold.

TYRONE had an incendiary fire on Sunday night. It started in the stable belonging to the Empire House of which W. H. Daughenbaugh is the proprietor. Three horses were burned to death and the loss at this stable was $2,000. Two of the horses that perished belonged to Augustus McClain, which, together with the harness, were valued at $400. William Vogt and Henry Burket also lost property in the flames.

WITH all the safety appliances of modern invention and with the best service that can be procurred in the management of railroads, there still remains a dreadfully wide margin of liability to accident, that may be narrowed but perhaps never wiped out entirely while men are fallible. The responsibility for the disaster near Chicago the other day is said to rest between the train dispatcher and the conductor of the stock train that was off time when it ran into the express. But when the balance is fixed upon either or both of these individuals, the query of what made the man or men make the mistake carries the question back to the premises of human liability to error.

The Centennial Celebration—The Accomodations, Speculation, Patriotism, etc.

NEW YORK, April 19th, 1889.

The Centennial celebration of the inauguration of George Washington as the first President of the United States will occur in New York City on April 30th, and May 1st, and the indications now are that this will be the grandest display of pageanty and patriotism that has ever been witnessed in this city, or on this continent.

It is estimated that the influx of visitors from all parts of the country, to honor this occasion, will not be less than five hundred thousand. More likely the number will reach nearly a million of persons. Military and other organizations will attend in body from all the states. Nearly every governor has signified his attention of being present. New York City, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Newark, and the people of all the towns and cities in this immediate vicinity will be here en masse.

The parade for the two days will certainly be the grandest affair of the kind ever witnessed in the United States. An interesting feature will be the three thousand school boys of this city who will march in the procession. Hundreds of civil and military organizations from the different states are assigned positions in the line. The interest in this celebration has reached to the utmost bounds of our great country; and representatives from the remotest territories will be present in large numbers. Already our streets are being crowded with visitors from all sections.

THE ACCOMMODATIONS.

Big as New York city is it will not be found big enough to accommodate comfortably, all of the hundreds of thousands of visitors who will be here to participate in this grand celebration. What shall be done with these overflowing masses is the perplexing problem. Not more than one fourth of the number will be likely to get a view of the parades. The windows on the line of the procession are selling at fabulous prices. On Fifth avenue single windows are sold to parties from $50 to $75 and $100 each, and $250 has been paid for a room with one window for the two days.

SPECULATION.

Thousands of dollars will be made by sharp speculators in the matter of boarding and furnished room accommodations. Single rooms in desirable locations are snapped up rapidly for from $10 to $25 and $50 a day, and this without board. One parlor floor sold yesterday for the three days of the celebration to a party for $700. Still there are many families who will accommodate a few visitors at moderate prices, from three to six dollars a day.

Country people who propose to visit New York on this occasion should write at once to secure suitable quarters. There is not a single hotel in the city that is not engaged to its fullest capacity; but most of the hotels have engaged private houses for the occasion and will in this way be able to place additional guests.

If our friends in Centre county want to see something that they can talk about to their children, and to their grand children, as the most wonderful event of their lives, they must come down to this great centennial celebration of George Washington's inauguration as first President of the United States.

PATRIOTISM.

Though it may seem to some an extravagance, and a wonderful waste of money, yet it is nevertheless true that such celebrations pay because of the enthusiastic patriotism which they transmit to the rising generation.

HIRAM TORRY.

Visitors to the Centennial.

From the glowing accounts given in the New York papers it is evident that the biggest celebration known to the present century is to occur in that city on April 30th and May 1st. The parades will be amazing in magnitude and display.

Our friends who propose to visit New York on this occasion can secure accomodations at reasonable rates by writing to New York City Boarding Bureau, No. 124 West 23d street, or by going directly to that office on their arrival in the city.

MR. A. J. ST. CLAIR, who was appointed postmaster at Unionville, is a gentleman thoroughly fitted for the position and his appointment is the best that could possibly have been made; It pleases all parties and is especially satisfactory to all Republicans. Every Republican in that locality will unite in congratulations to the Post Master General on such a happy selection.

ECONOMY IN EXCESS.

The desire of Adjutant General Hastings to run his department economically is highly laudable, but when he carries his zeal in that direction so far as to want to send the Pennsylvania troops to New York and back without costing this State a penny he suggests a doubt whether his economy does not pass the line which is consistent with a decent self-respect. The subsistence of the Pennsylvania troops in New York must be paid for by someope. If New York or the Centennial Committee insist on footing the bill, well and good; but certainly the State should be in a position to take care of its own troops and not leave them dependent on the reluctant or half-hearted hospitality of anybody.

If the Centennial Committee expected to pay the expenses of the visiting troops when they invited them to take part in the Centennial parade of April 30, it is strange that they did not take account of it in estimating the probable expenditures. That they did not do this, but have had to take an unexpected and unwelcome step in order to raise the money to feed the Pennsylvania troops, is proof that they did not intend quite so much by the invitation as the Adjutant General assumes that they did.—Philadelphia Press.

MORRIS D. WICKERSHAM, who was on Friday appointed United States Attorney for the Southern District of Alabama, is a former Pennsylvanian and brother of Ex-State Superintendent of Schools Prof. J. P. Wickersham, of Lancaster city. Years ago Mr. Wickersham taught school at Columbia, Millersville and other portions of Lancaster County. He entered the Union army during the war of the Rebellion and after the war went South. During President Grant's administration he became Postmaster at Mobile, Alabama. He married a southern lady and became permanently indentified with the people and interests of Alabama. His appointment is a good one, and his old friends in Pennsylvania will rejoice in his good fortune.

How pleasant to hear the news that the passengers on the wrecked steamer Danmark are saved. Their relatives and indeed all sympathizing people here had to submit to more than a week of suspense, with a probability that the worst possible fate had befallen the 700 souls on board. But at length there is the certainty that they were saved and soon afterwards one-half of the large number arrived in Philadelphia. The next steamer that touched on the Azores island brought the others. It should have been an occasion for general gratitude and thanks giving.

A NEW YORK man found a package containing $31,000 in cash and its equivalent, and on returning it to the bank whose messenger had lost it was munificently rewarded; the cashier, after counting the money over carefully and finding that the finder had retained none of it, handing him a five-dollar bill. No wonder the Pennsylvania troops have to pay their own way at the Washington Centennial, when bank officials there shower money around them in this reckless way.

PROHIBITION can be enforced and is enforced thoroughly in Kansas, where even its enemies have become its friends and to oppose it is to dig a man's political grave. No good citizen will say that this or any other law which the people make cannot be enforced. The laws are made by the majority and every good citizen must aid in enforcing law whether the law pleases him or not. Not to aid in enforcing law is to prove that the person who thus refuses is an anarchist—because that means opposition to law.

COMMISSIONER TANNER, of the Pension Bureau, received during the first week in the present month 70,781 letter and other pieces of mail matter pertaining to the business of his office, and last week he received 69,000 pieces. The Commissioner desires this fact made public as a general explanation of delays in answering correspondence of Grand Army men and others having personal interest in pension cases now pending in his office.

For the Amendment.

A CITIZEN OF HOWARD WHO WANTS THE LIQUOR BUSINESS SWEPT FROM THE STATE.

HOWARD, April 20, 1889.

MR. EDITOR: As no cry has gone up from Howard on the Constitutional Amendment, I thought of giving a few reasons why we should vote for it. The said amendment is nothing more nor less than to prohibit, by law, the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage. The Licenes Law has been well tried for the last two centuries in its different shades, and if you wish to learn the results go visit the State prisons, county jails and alms houses, and listen to the sad tales related by the inmates, and you will have a faint idea of the sad effects of the liquor traffic. Go if you please and visit the home of the murdered policeman in Renoyo and that of Cassidy, a victim in our own county, and ask the widows and orphans of those men what has caused all this sadness and distress? The answer will be the traffic. From this we see that misery and degradation are brought to the homes of thousands of our fellow beings through this infernal business.

Friends, individually we are injured financially, physically and morally. When we look at the fact that at least five times as much money is expended by demands made upon us directly by the present License Law as is received through the same we are convinced at once that we suffer financially. Thousands to-day are suffering bodily because their fathers were drunkards. Diseases are handed from generation to generation. An appetite for the accursed bowl often reaches the third generation. Frequently are our ears assaulted by the noise of a drunken row. The fact is evident and should satisfy every unbiased mind, that there are numerous ways through which we suffer physically from intemperance. That the license law is the mother of drunkenness no one will dare to deny; and that drunkenness is sin is as true as the Word of God itself. From these assertions as evident facts, we need no further arguments. Where drunkenness prevails morality is unknown. The last and greatest reason why we should vote for it, is because it is right.

Voters of this great Commonwealth, we are holding this grand decision in our own hands. Let us acquit ourselves like men and sweep this most detestable business from the borders of our State. Fathers, you should vote for it. Your sons are probably about entering the business arena of life. Temptations are hemming them in on all sides. Vote for the Amendment and remove the temptation. Sons, you should vote for it. Your fathers, even if not now victims of the intoxicating cup, may yet become enslaved. Merchants should vote for it. There is no food nor clothing in alcohol. Men must be fed and clothed the same if we have high license, low license or no license. The probabilities are that they will be better fed and clothed under no license. Consequently your business will not be curtailed but enhanced by voting for the Amendment. Merchants and laborers should vote for it.

Church members should vote for it. Of all the different classes we have mentioned there are none that bear the same responsibility as church-members. They are always expected to be on the right side.

Brethren, there are only two sides to this question when we view it morally—the side of right and the side of wrong. By our walk and conversation we are to show the world that we are on the side of right. Let us come out on the Lord's side. Work for the general good of humanity by working, talking and voting for the Amendment. There is only one class that we could reasonably expect to vote against the Amendment and they are those who are engaged in the liquor traffic. Could they vote against it? If they would stop and ask themselves the the profound question, "What will it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" Liquor dealers settle this question for yourselves.

Yours respectfully,

REUBEN PLETCHER.

All from Unionville.

The latest news we have from Bush Hollow is that Spetts store is doing a very large business:

Horticulturist Wm. Fisher has some of his last crop of apples for sale.

Jack Griest and Budd Griest are two of our enterprising merchants.

Ed. Lucas keeps the only hotel in our place. As a landlord he is a success.

A. J. St. Clair, our new postmaster, is an old vet and works at shoemaking. He takes possession of his office, May 1st.

Jerry Blair, who receives a pension and is obliged to move around on crutches, is keeping "bachelor's hall," where he entertains his friends royally.

Mr. John Rumberger is still engaged in the capon business and expects to die a millionaire.

Our G. A. R. Post is in a healthy condition and so is our new I. O. O. F. lodge. The former meets in hall over Hoover's store and the latter in hall over Jack Griest's store.

W. Vanvalin is our popular and expert dentist. He puts up some of the best work in the state. His services are in constant demand.

George W. Rumberger, late Commissioner's clerk, is filling a responsible position at Retort, Pa. His interesting family still reside here.

We venture the assertion that there is not a town in Centre Co. that can boast of pleasanter homes or happier people than our borough contains. Property owners as well as other residents take pride in having their homes neatly painted and the grounds surrounding them nicely ornamented with flowers and shrubs.

OCCASIONAL.

ARBOR DAY.

Public events are necessarily educational in character. They draw attention to specific matters and have a tendency to increase the knowledge of the individual. Thus a great storm which spreads over the country, levels towns to the ground and brings untold loss and misery to one portion of the community, to another portion becomes a means of instruction and information in regard to meteorological phenomena.

In a similar manner public days observed in commemoration of historical events, or for any other purpose, become chiefly instrumental for good in proportion as they are educational. The Fourth of July, doubtless, has done more to keep alive the sentiment of patriotism and perpetuate a knowledge of American institutions in the minds of recurring generations than all the books ever written. So, too, the Centennial observances of the last few years have wonderfully educated the people with reference to the Revolutionary epoch.

In this light should be regarded the celebration of Arbor Day. Trees may be planted here and there throughout the State, men may leave their employments and indulge in a day of needed rest; but the chief significance of the occasion will be the gathering of the school children of Pennsylvania to receive instruction, more or less definite and exact with reference to American forest trees. In time the worth of the day as an educational force will be enhanced. But much is already accomplished.

THE Washington Press says that: Many intelligent Democrats in the South have seen the dangerous tendency of their free trade representatives in Congress. They have realized that to further continue them in power means the ultimate ruin of their material interests. The scales have fallen from their eyes, and in the future they are determined that those whom they send to Congress shall be more in accord with them upon economic questions. The 'party whip' has lost its fear for these men. They comprehend "that self preservation is the first law of nature" and that "free trade" means to them a destruction of their hope of acquiring a competence and a cruel blow to the advancement and prosperity of that section of the country of which they are residents. As was remarked before, it is no wonder that the Courier Journal is worried at the unpleasant outlook.

THE New York Mail and Express says: Isn't it about time that the continual sneering of certain editors at young men of eminence and brains who happen to have had famous fathers come to an end? There is no sense in it. It is not American. It is not manly. It is not right. There is no earthly reason why the son of a talented and forceful father should not have, by inheritance and training, as the younger Pitt had, as Charles James Fox had, as John Quincy Adams had, ability and character of very high order. To be sure, the editors who are raising such a halcyon and vociferous out cry about "great men's sons" are democrats and Mugwumps. But even democratic and Mugwump editors ought to be ashamed of uttering such stuff.

Mr. and Mrs. Abram Valentine, of Atlantic City; Mr and Mrs. Evan Valentine, of Philadelphia and Mr. and Mrs. Holmes of Birmingham attended Mr. Bond Valentine's funeral.

A negro in Dougherty county, Georgia, has adopted a new and ingenious scheme of counterfeiting money. Having quite a lot of old Confederate money, he dyed it green and passed a bill on a young man named Gregory.

Poetry.

JAKE AND THE DEACON.

The writer of this poem says it was written while he was in Bellefonte and that it will appear in the "Atlantic Monthly."

Now Jake was one of them fellows,
Who, you must understand
That could see right through a person
That practiced the underhand.

Nor there wasn't no foolin' of Jake,
For his like I never seed;
It would'nt take him a minute
To point you out a weed,

There wasen't a man in the village
That had it in his power,
To know the way that Jake did,
The weed from the innocent flower.

For he'd jist look into their faces,
And then follered their doom;
If he couldn't scent in their presence
The oder of Christian perfume.

Now, once there came to the village,
A deacon, away from the South;
Who silenced all other talkers
Whenever he opened his mouth.

And whenever he'd git up in the pulpit
To give the gospel a turn,
Why, he'd talk in sich awful riddles,
We never his meaning could learn.

He'd run out a lot of Latin,
And then a lot of Greek;
Until we got to fightin'
Regular once a week.

But the deacon paid no attention,
To the remarks that we'd let fall,
And jist seemed as pleasant as if
We had'nt said 'em at all.

Until one day he was walkin'
With a gal that Jake admired;
And this little incident seemed
To strike the iron already fired.

For Jake went up to the deacon,
And, takin' the lady aside
So that space between 'em
Was rather a little wide—

"Now," said Jake (to that stately deacon
Who hailed from the sunny South,)
"I'll jist take this opportunity
And for once I'll open my mouth."

"Hain't you the fellow that's preachin'
The words of our blessed Lord?
And instead of makin' it easy
Hain't you makin' it pretty hard?

You throw your Greek and Latin,
About at a terrible rate,
And instid of gainin' our love
You're gittin' our awful hate!"

Then the deacon hung his head,
And never a word said he,
Because the gal had been a tellin'
The way that Jake could see.

And all these bold imposters,
Will learn some blessed hour,
That there's always some one that knows
The weed from the innocent flower.

A LITTLE GIRL.

Her witching eyes have growd more keen,
My lady trips the stairs adown
To greet the rays of morning,
Which glisten round her head, a crown,
Her natal day adorning.

What age's my lady? Just thirteen.
You'd think she was far older.
Her witching eyes have grown more keen,
Her teens, too, make her colder.

Alas! how childhood, with a whirl,
From yesterday is fleeting!
I called her then "a little girl;"
To-day she scorns this greeting.

Flit on, my lady, through the years
Which give to youth their plenty
Of love and grief, of hopes and fears,
Till age proclaims you twenty

Then, as each year time steals a curl
And dimple from you (doubting),
Methinks I'll call you "little girl"
Without disdainful pouting.

IN A GARDEN.

Baby, see the flowers!
—Baby sees
Fairer things than these,
Fairer though they be than dreams of ours.

Baby, hear the birds!
—Baby knows
Better songs than those,
Sweeter though they sound than sweetest words.

Baby, see the moon!
—Baby's eyes
Laugh to watch it rise,
Answering light with love and night with noon.

Baby, hear the sea!
—Baby's face
Takes a graver grace,
Touched with wonder what the sound may be.

Baby, see the star!
—Baby's hand
Opens warm and bland,
Calm in claim of all things fair that are.

Baby, hear the bells!
—Baby's head
Bows as rise for bed,
Now the flowers curl round and close their cells,

Baby, flower of light,
—Sleep and see
Brighter dreams than we
Till good day shall smile away good night.

Our Story Teller.

NED MOXON'S GRIEVANCES.

Alice Weedon, after a short visit to Plympton, became engaged to Edward Moxon of that place, and a few months later married him. All of her friends rejoiced in her good fortune. Mr. Moxon was one of the most influential men in Plympton. He was a man of high integrity and scholarly tastes; he was young, singularly handsome, gentle- and honorable; in a word a Christian gentleman. He had inherited the family homestead, a large mansion in the midst of a great estate, and he spared no pains nor cost in getting and decorating it, being resolved that everything in her new home should tell his wife of his love and care.

People in Plympton said to each other, significantly: "Now, surely, Ned Moxon will at least be a happy man!"

But on the morning of the wedding-day, while the sun was shining, and Alice, in her white robes, her blue eyes beaming with love, come to meet him, his brow suddenly grew black. He pointed to the wedding presents.

"The scotts in Plympton, I see, have sent you a miserable pair of sugar-tongs! Now, what can that mean? The Scotts are among my nearest friends; they know how much I have done to serve them. Cheap and light weight! Picked up at some auction no doubt!"

"Dear Edward, what does it matter? What do we care for sugar tongs to-day?"

"I hope, Alice," he said gravely, "that you do not suppose I care for the sugar-tongs? It is the affection which they represent, or rather, do not represent. The Scotts have been very dear to me. There is something underneath this which I do not understand.'

"Do not let us think of it now," said Alice.

The guests were gathering in the parlor below; the minister had come. She trembled and grew pale, while her sisters, sobbing and laughing, arranged her veil. Edward soothed her tenderly. He was quite alive to the eminence of the moment. But just before they went down, he drew her aside and said: "You wronged me Alice, in supposing that I cared for the sugar-tongs as sugar-tongs. They express to me a lack of friennship where I have a right to expect it, And your mistake shows a lack of confidence in me which"—

"Oh, Edward, you are not angry with me now?" she cried.

"Not angry," he said, in a tone of patient suffering, "but hurt. Come, dear, they are waiting."

Alice remembered with shame ever afterward that the words of the holy rite were mingled in her mind with the Scotts and sugar-tongs.

On their wedding journey they visited New York and Boston, where they were welcomed by hosts of friends, who told each other that Ned's cup of happiness was full. He, himself, was sure of it. Alice grew more lovely and near to his soul with each day. But the affair of the sugar-tongs rankled in his mind.

"You wronged me, Alice," he told her. "How could you suppose that I cared for the money-value of the wretched things?"

"I never did, Edward!" she protested, with tears. "Never!"

"Well, well, let us dismiss the subject. Why do you cry? It is not you who have suffered injustice."

"How can you be angry at such a paltry thing?" she exclaimed, indignantly.

"Angry? You wrong me again. I am only hurt. You do not apparently understand my character at all, Alice dear. We will speak no more of it."

But the next day and the next the Scott sugar-tongs were brought up afresh, and the same weary round was traveled over again.

There were other grievances. In Boston the Purdys did not call upon Alice for two days. They, too, were his dear friends, and the neglect "showed a lack of affection at which he was not angry, but hurt." At Niagara an overcharge in the hotel bill made him blind to the grandeur of the Falls, the tawdry colored lights and the oddities of the little town, all of which gave Alice such keen enjoyment.

"Don't think of it, Edward," she said. "It was only fifty cents, after all."

"Is it possible, Alice, that you think I care for the money! It is the fact that I have been overreached which annoys me."

"I know. But"——

"No, you do not know," he said, with an air of stern endurance. "You think me mercenary. I am sorry. Let us talk no more of it."

Alice, at first, tried to laugh away these grim and ugly suspicions in her husband's brain; but that only made their growth more rank. "I am not a sensitive man," he would say. "I am not apt to imagine slights. But when I am wounded to the quick by your injustice, your misconception of me, it is hard to hear you turn me into ridicule.'

She tried then to argue him out of his morbid fancies, but this was impossible. Concerning the tariff, or the last discovery in science, or a new book, nobody could be more rational than Ned Moxon; but no reason, no argument could touch his grievances.

It seemed to her that he gloated over them. He woke her in the night to tell her of his deep affection for her or his friends and of the ingratitude with which he was repaid. Every careless work or trifling neglect was a black proof of that ingratitude.

Going up the Saguenay, Alice met on the boat her old friend Fraulien B., and the two girls chatted together for an hour on deck, while Moxon, with a heavy brow, paced up and down.

"You know," he said afterward, "that I do not speak German. It is the lack of consideration that hurts me."

"But she cannot speak English, and"—

"Pray do not explain. It is a trifle. These things sting, however. We will talk no more about it."

For two days of their homeward journey he held her aloof with the most chilly courtesy, sitting silent by her side staring out of the car window with the face of a martyr. She found out at last that a button was wantig on his glove.

"No, I did not tell you," he said with a patient, injured smile. "Love has keen eyes for these little services. Ah, I wonder sometimes if you ever loved me, dear? If it was not respect—esteem you gave me."

"And all this," thought the tortured Alice, "to grow out of a button!"

But she now neither joked nor argued with him.

All Plympton, when they arrived, watched them curiously. They knew Ned and his grievances. "She has sound sense and fine tact, and she loves him dearly," the older women said. "She will cure him, if anybody can."

Her first effort to cure was to make home bright and cheerful, in hopes that the innocent gayety might drive away his moody suspicions. But he became more meloncholy each day, telling her at last with a sad patience.

"I do not like company. I had thought our life would be a long, happy tete-a-tete in our home."

"I am so sorry, Edward," she cried. "I only brought these people here to amuse you."

When the house was empty she bade no more guests. Then Edward grew more wretched than before.

"This is unkind of you, Alice. You condemn yourself to solitude to please me, as if I were a tyrant and an ogre. I exact no such sacrifice. You are placing me in a false position."

If Mr. Moxon had been a wicked or malignant man his wife would probably not have found this trait so difficult to deal with. It would have been in harmony with his whole character. But he was an affectionate, generous fellow, showering kindnesses upon his family, his friends and the poor. He was a liberal, public-spirited citizen; he took the delight of a boy in picnics, fishing parties, or any other gayety among the young people. It is true that at each one some sting was given to what he called his affections, but what really was his self-love, and these stings festered in his mind for years.

"Ned," one of his cousins said to Alice, "is the most lovable fellow in the world; yet he has a grudge against every family in Plympton."

As time passed and children began to grow up around them, the strain upon their mother became almost intolerable. Edward loved his children passionately; he heaped luxuries upon them; secretly he believed them superior to all other human beings; but he nagged them incessantly and each of their petty faults he received as a personal insult and injury to himself.

"Tom" he would exclaim, with a face of despair, "is biting his nails again! I have spoken to him about it a thousand times. It is open defiance! That boy despises me, and he shows it!" Or, "Rosa writes a wretched hand. She knows how ambitious I am that she should excel in penmanship. She has no affection for me, Alice—none whatever!"

It was in vain that his wife represented that all children were fallible, or begged him to let time and patience do their work.

"No; I make every sacrifice for them. If they loved me, they would not pain me in this way," he would reply, with real agony of soul when Rosa failed in her geography, or Bob came home bedaubed with mud.

Alice, beyond other women, possessed sound sense and a sweet, joyous temper; but as she neared middle age, her friends wondered why, blessed as she was with wealth, good loving children, and a husband whom his church, party and state honored, she should have the jaded, watchful face of one who has had a long struggle with disease or disgrace.

Bob, who was a fiery, excitable lad, understood the meaning of her look.

"Poor mother!" he said, one day after he came home from college, taking her hand into his arms. "It would be easier to fight with wild beasts at Ephesus than to keep guard over my father's temper and mine. But I will make an end of it, soon."

"What do you mean, Robert?"

"Your father means you to study law and medicine at home," she gasped.

"I know; but, mother, if we stay there will be an open rupture. Father takes every difference of character or opinion as a personal insult. We are not as patient as you. Let us go to California and shift for ourselves. We are no longer children, we are men."

"It will be better in the end," pleaded Tom. "He will love us better out of sight."

"How will you break it to him?" sobbed Alice. "It will kill him to think that his temper has driven you from him."

"He need never know it," said Rob. "I will only show him the business side of the matter." He went out to find his father.

But Edward guessed the truth. An hour later his wife found him sitting alone. His features were drawn and sharpened as by sudden age.

"Alice," he said, "the boys want to leave us. I feel that they are alienated from—me. I fear that I have been too stern with them." She did not answer.

"You think I have been too stern?"

"No, Edward." Alice could hold her peace for a lifetime, but if forced to speak she would not bridge the gulf with little lies. "You have not been stern, but exacting and fretful."

He was silent, never having received such a blow. "To you?" he said in a low voice. "You have found it hard to bear?"

"Sometimes, my husband." She went up to him and put her arms about him; but he gently pushed her aside.

"I would rather be alone. I exacting and fretful!"

He had always felt that he was dealing love as largesse about him, receiving poor return; and he had been a suspicious, unreasonable tyrant, making home intolerable! He had never seen this face in the mirror before, but he knew it was his own.

"Ask the boys to defer their preparations," he said to his wife. "I will talk it over with them when I can think clearly."

But they never talked it over.

Mr. Moxon had been tempted to invest heavily in a mining speculation. The news of its failure came to him that day. He read the telegram aloud and laid it down.

"Are you deeply involved in it, Edward?" asked his wife.

"Yes. If this be true we shall lose everything—stocks, land and house. I am an old man to begin the world again."

"Why, father!" Bob sprang from his chair and ran to him. "We'll begin it together; you and Tom and I. Three boys! We'll go to California and start afresh."

"Tom had his arm about the other shoulder. Edward looked up at them and at his wife who was kneeling at his feet. He laughed, but the tears came.

"Please God, it may not be as bad as we think; but if it is, boys, I'm ready."

It was even worse than they thought. When the business was settled there was a bare pittance left, hardly enough to take the family to California.

But through these dreary days it was noticeable that not a word of complaint came from Ned Moxon's lips. The man in him rose to face this real disaster. He was hearty, cheerful, courageous. Every new proof of kindness from his friends, who crowded about him in this dark hour.

"But it is the boys who will carry us through," he said, with triumph. "They stand by me shoulder to shoulder. They have heads for business such as I never had, Alice."

The Moxons, father and sons, have had a hard fight for success in California. For years they marched together over a bare space in life, facing poverty and even want. Edward Moxon knew that it was his own folly which had brought his wife and children into these straits, and he worked with desperate energy to protect them from hardships. All the strength and tenderness of his character came out; and aggrieved whine never was now heard in his voice.

"I wonder," said Rob one day to his mother, "how I ever could have thought father ill-tempered. He bears the worst of troubles with such large, calm goodhumor."

That evening Rosa putting her sugar in her tea, balanced on her fingers. "Light weight, Mamma? Where did they come from?"

Her father frowned.

"They came from a man," he said, "who, in the time of my trouble, offered to back me with money to any amount. If you note every disagreeable trifle, Rosa, you will make life a burden."

Then Alice felt that her husbands cure was complete.

But there are so many Ned Moxons in the world? So many wives and children are crushed under their many virtues and their single fault!

Is there no cure for them but bankruptcy or death?—New York Independent.

Money in the Treasury.

People who sometimes wonder how they will be able to get their next breakfast probably find it hard to realize that there are about $200,000,000 of silver and gold in the United States Treasury at Washington, besides $283,000,000 in new United States notes and about $218,000,000 worth of bonds belonging to national banks. Every dollar of this must be counted when the new Treasurer goes into office, and the work is really a heavy job. The fact that in all of the counts of the money at the Treasury the largest discrepancy that ever occurred was two cents shows the systematic safeguards that surround that department of the Government.

According to Grand Secretary Nisbet's report to the Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, F. and A. M., there are in this jurisdiction 380 Lodges with a membership of 38,545. The Grand Lodge Charity fund has a principal invested of $72,000 and the Stephen Girard bequest a principal of $61,000. The commissioners of the sinking fund have now on hand in investments and cash $419,965.85.

His Heart in His Work.

A Philadelphia manufacturer recently told to a friend the story of one of his superintendents.

"Twelve years ago a boy applied to me for work. He was employed at low wages. Two days later the award of premiums were made to manufactories at the centenial exhibition.

'Passing down Chestnut street early in the morning, I saw Bob poring over the bulletin board in front of a newspaper office. Suddenly he jerked off his cap with a shout.

'What is the matter?' some one asked.

'We have taken a medal for sheetings!' he exclaimed.

'I said nothing, but kept my eyes on Bob. The boy who could identify himself in two days with my interests would be of use to me hereafter.

'His work was to deliver packages. I found that he took a real pride in it. His wagon must be cleaner, his horse better fed, his orders filled more promptly than those of the men belonging to the other firm. He was as zealous for the house as though he had been a partner in it. I have advanced him step by step. His fortune is made and the firm have added to their capital so much energy and force.'

Victims of Overwork.

Herbert Spencer, the philosopher, who several years ago expounded to the American people the beauties of what he styled the gospel of relaxation, brought considerable criticism on himself by shortly afterward falling a victim to mental overwork. And now Rev. Morgan A. Dix, rector of Trinity Church, of New York, who has for years been an intellectual force of the metropolis, and has inveighed against the worry and the cares to which men subject themselves by too great activity and restlessness, threatens to succumb. It is the 'pace which kills' and no warning seems to have any effect upon the American people.

In the Wrong Office.

Peddler—My dear sir, do you know how much time you lose dipping a pen into the ink! Ten dips a minute means 600 dips an hour or 6,000 dips in ten hours, and each dip consumes—"

Business man—Yes, I know; I have argued it all out.

Peddler—And yet I find you still writing in the same old way.

Business Man—Yes; I am using the fountain pen you sold me about a month ago—using it in the old way because it won't write any other way.

Peddler—Beg pardon; I'm in the wrong office.

A Hint to Young Lawyers.

Chicago Journal.

First young lawyer—What are you doing now?

Second young lawyer—I am interested in a suit that may make my fortune.

First young lawyer—What is it.

Second young lawyer—I am trying to marry a rich girl.

Quillpen—'Is your sister still writing under an assumed name, Penman?'

Penman—'Yes; Mrs. Smith. She assumed Smith's name about a year ago."

Helpful Little Sister: "Sis, why can't Mr. Olcott spell his own name?" Sister: "I don't know, Marie. Why?" Helpful Little Sister: "Why, because he comes to C-U, and there he sticks."

City Business Man—'At last I am rich enough to retire from business.'

Friend—'What are you going to do?'

'I am going to buy the old farm that I ran away from and live on it.'

Brakeman (on railroad train at night): "Pough-keep-sie!" Poughkeepsie Lady; 'Dear me? Will these railroad men ever learn to pronounce so folks can understand them? What station is this?' Friend: 'This is our station—P'kepsy.'

Mable (passing the Whippersnapper Club): "Mamma, dear, what do all those men always sit in that window for, I wonder?" Mrs. N.: "They sit in that window, pet, in order to let all of us see that they have that window to sit in."

Young man [haughtily to old man]—'No, sir; I have no reference. I belong to the famous Key family, sir; and that is enough.'

Old Man (bluntly)—'Any relation to the Mon-Key and the Whis-Key and the Don-Key families.'

Johnny Dumpsey—'Say, Willie, didn't you ever think you'd like to be a pirate when you grew up?'

Willie Popinjay (contemptuously)—'No! Pirates are played out. I want to be a member of some big Trust, or a boodle Alderman or something of that sort.'

Said Paddleford to his wife on the way back from the museum: "I am firmly convinced that women have an innate, natural, constitutional love of the horrible." "Good thing for you," she retorted, "or you might have been a batchelor to your dying day."

—The chemical labratory of the Bellefonte Furnace Company is now near their furnace on the fair grounds and is quite an elaborate and interesting place.

THE NEXT ONE WOULD SETTLE.

ONE OF THE CUSTOMS THAT TRAMP PRINTERS ALWAYS LIVES UP TO.

"You had something to say a short time ago about the suspicion with which boarding house keepers regard printers," said a typesetter on a morning paper. "It reminds me of a printer named Jack Robinson I ran across out in Iowa a number of years ago, before I married and settled down. He told me of an experience of his which I think is unique. He said he arrived in Des Moines one day with a trifle over $5 in money about him, and finding the prospect good for work, asked one of the boys at the office to direct him to a boarding house. He called at the address furnished, talked with the landlord, selected his room and agreed on terms. Finally the old man asked what his business was. He said he was a printer, whereat the old man threw up both his hands.

"That settles it,' he said: 'you can't get in this house.'

"Why not?' asked Robinson.

"Never mind, you can't get into this house. I wouldn't have you hear under any circumstances. Get out.'

"'But here!' said Robinson. 'What kind of a deal is this? What have printers ever done to you that you should treat one of them who is a perfect stranger to you in this sort of style?'

"'I'll tell you' said the old man. 'A printer came here, engaged board with me and skipped at the end of the first week. That's all. I don't want any more.'

"How much did he owe you?'

"'Five dollars.'

"'Well that's all right; you don't understand. It's a custom among printers to do that once in a while and the next one that happens along squares it. Here, and he handed out $5, which the old man gratefully accepted with the most profuse apologies for being unacquainted with one of the customs in-vogue among traveling printers.

'For the next two weeks Robinson paid his board promptly, making $15 which he had turned into the old man's coffers. The next week he went to the landlord and said: "I want to buy some clothes and fix myself up, and I'm just $15 short. If you'll let me have it I'll start in next week paying it back, and won't have to buy my stuff piecemeal."

'The landlord thought pretty well of him by this time and readily loaned him the $15. Robinson then bought his clothes and other truck, and a day or so after he bought a railroad ticket to another town and quietly departed, leaving this note to his landlord:

"I'm gone. The next printer that comes along will settle. Just tell him how much it is. Good by."

"I reckon that that man never could be brought to think that there was a printer anywhere alive that was any good."

If we were all to bear this in mind we would often avoid being a source of discomfort to our neighbors

Miss Effie T. Straub the agent for a Valuable Work.

Our attention has just been called to a work of wonderful interest to hundreds of people in this part of the state—"Glimpses of Fifty years," an autobiography of Frances E. Willard, prepared by special and unanimous request of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union convention of 1887. It contains an introduction by Hannah Whitall Smith, author of "The Christian Secret of a Happy Life." This is a large work, comprising 700 pages and over 50 illustrations, including an excellent steel ingraving of Miss Willard. In this work is portrayed the life of the most widely known and universally beloved woman of America, if not in the world, as well as the only complete history of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and kindred organizations from the Crusade to 1889. Miss Effie Straub, formerly of this place, and well known as an accomplished young lady, has been appointed general agent for Blair and Centre counties for the sale of this valuable work. She will visit the several towns and unions of these two counties in their order, but any persons who desire to secure the work at once, or to correspond with her in regard to sub-agencies may address her at 1125 Seventh Avenue, Altoona, Pa.

Two Extremely Ancient Relics.

The Houser family of Houserville are perhaps the oldest family in this county in the line of descent connecting them with this part of the State. The ancestors of those now living here were the first settlers of that locality and they can trace their lineage far back into Germany. They doubtless surpass all other families in the antiquity of the heirlooms which they possess. Two of them are remarkably notable. In the possession of Mr. Jacob Houser is a watch which has been in the Houser familythree hundred years. Of course, it was made in Germany from whence it was brought. It still keeps good time and is in constant use. Frederick Houser owns a box which is unique and interesting from the fact that it, too, is known to be over three hundred years old. These are older than the relics usually made much of, and we are sure they cannot be excelled in interest.

The Houser family, who own them, is very numerous in the county. Unlike most old families there is no prospect that they will disappear in the near future. They have increased wonderfully and are now multitudinous. They are excellent people and desirable citizens.

Beats Them All.

Mr. Edselle, of Callao, Peru, formerly of the United States Navy, has invented a human rocket which fires him 15,545 feet into the air, from whence he comes down in safety. The nature of the explosive is a secret and is called dynoscenimite. Its peculiar property is that it is detonating. A small volume of the solid makes an immense volume of vapor, and lifts the machine with lightning rapidity into the clouds. The test took place under Peruvian Government patronage near Callao in December. The charge, touched by electricity, sent the machine 15,545 feet, and the descent by parachute was perfect. Signor Camarara landed five miles from the starting point no worse for the trip. Fifteen thousand people were present, and watched with telescopes the rise and fall of the machine. Mr. Edselle will start for Buffalo within a few days.

WHAT MR H I BUDD, CORRESPONDING SECRETARY OF THE BURLINGTON COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY, HAS TO SAY ABOUT THE MICROBE KILLER.

MOUNT HOLLY, Feb. 17, 1889.
RADAM'S MICROBE KILLER CO.
GENTLEMEN:—Until persuaded by a regular practicing physician, last October, to try William Radam's Microbe Killer, I had experimented with many different kinds of patent medicines, and had placed myself under treatment from several of our most noted physicians, in addition to which I visited many of the consumptive health resorts of the country, all in a vain search for relief from an inherited tendency to pulmonary disease, aggravated by attacks of pneumonia, congestion and inflammation. In sheer despair I tried your remedy, but shall ever bless the doctor who recommended it, for I am now entirely free from the racking cough that made life miserable; am improving in health and rapidly gaining in strength. My friends are so surprised at my improved condition that they almost weary me relating the story of my cure. I have suffered so much and seen so much suffering from this fatal disease that I feel it my duty to advise all to try what I believe has proved my salvation. Sincerely yours,
H I BUDD.

Published by order of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, in pursuance of Article XVIII of the Constitution.

Joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of this Commonwealth:

SECTION I. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following amendment is proposed to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the Eighteenth Article thereof:

AMENDMENT

There shall be an additional article to said Constitution to be designated as Article XIX, as follows:

ARTICLE XIX.

The manufacture, sale, or keeping for sale of intoxicating liquor, to be used as a beverage, is hereby prohibited, and any violation of this prohibition shall be a misdemeanor, punishable as shall be provided by law.

The manufacture, sale, or keeping for sale of intoxicating liquor for other purposes than as a beverage may be allowed in such manner only as may be prescribed by law. The General Assembly shall, at the first session succeeding the adoption of this article of the Constitution, enact laws with adequate penalties for its enforcement.

AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION proposed to the citizens of this Commonwealth by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania for their approval or rejection at a special election to be held June 18, 1889. Published by order of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, in pursuance of Article XVIII of the Constitution.

Joint resolutions proposing an amendment to the constitution of the commonwealth:

SECTION 1. Be it Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met That the following is proposed as an amendment to the constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in accordance with the provisions of the eighteenth article thereof.

AMENDMENT.

Strike out from section one, of article eight, the four qualifications for voters which reads as follows:

"If twenty-two years of age or upwards he shall have paid, within two years, a state or county tax, which shall have been assessed at least two months, and paid at least one month before the election," so that the section which reads as follows:

"Every male citizen, twenty-one years of age, possessing the following qualifications, shall be entitled to vote at all elections:

First. He shall have been a citizen of the United States at least one month.

Second. He shall have resided in the state one year, (or if, having previously been a qualified elector or native born citizen of the state, he shall have removed therefrom and returned, then six months) immediately preceding the election.

Third. He shall have resided in the election district where he shall offer to vote at least two months immediately preceding the election.

Fourth. If twenty-two years of age or upwards, he shall have paid within two years, a state or county tax, which shall have been assessed at least two months and paid at least one month before the election," shall be amended, so as to read as follows:

Every male citizen twenty-one years of age, possessing the following qualifications, shall be entitled to vote at the polling place of the election district of which he shall at the time be a resident and not elsewhere.

First. He shall have been a resident of the United States at least thirty days.

Second. He shall have resided in the state one year (or if, having previously been a qualified elector or native born citizen of the state, he shall have removed therefrom and returned, then six months) immediately preceding the election.

Third. He shall have resided in the election district where he shall offer to vote at least thirty days immediately preceding the election. The legislature, at the session thereof next after the adoption of this section, shall, and from time to time thereafter may, enact laws to properly enforce this provision.

Fourth. Every male citizen of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a citizen for thirty days and an inhabitant of this state one year next preceding an election, except at municipal elections, and for the last thirty days a resident of the election district in which he may offer his vote, shall be entitled to vote at such election in the election district of which he shall at the time be a resident and not elsewhere for all officers that now are or hereafter may be elected by the people: Provided, That in time of war no elector in the actual military service of the State or of the United States, in the army or navy thereof, shall be deprived of his vote by reason of his absence from such election district, and the legislature shall have power to provide the manner in which and the time and place at which such absent electors may vote, and for the return and canvas of their votes in the election district in which they respectively reside.

Fifth. For the purpose of voting, no person shall be deemed to have gained or lost a residence by reason of his presence or absence while employed in the service of the United States or the State, nor while engaged in the navigation of the waters of the State or of the high seas, nor while a student of any college or seminary of learning, nor while kept at any almshouse or public institution, except the inmates of any home for disabled and indigent soldiers and sailors, who, for the purpose of voting, shall be deemed to reside in the election district where said home is located. Laws shall be made for ascertaining, by proper proofs, the citizens who shall be entitled to the right of suffrage hereby established."

Easter.

The festival of the resurrection of Christ derives its name from the festival of the goddess Ostara, in Anglo Saxon, Easter which the Saxons of old were wont to celebrate about the same season at which the Christian festival of Easter occurs. In the ancient church the celebration lasted eight days, but after the eleventh century it was limited to three, and in later times to two days. It was formerly the favorite time for performing the rite of baptism. The courts of justice were closed, and alms dispensed to the poor and needy. Slaves also received their freedom at this season, and as the austerities of Lent were over, the people gave themselves up to enjoyment, hence the day was called the "Sunday of Joy." In the 16th century a storm against all undue hilarity at that time was successfully raised. The use of eggs at this season was originally, symbolical of the revivification of nature. the springing forth of life in the spring From the Christian point of view it has been usually emblematic of the reurrection and future life.

Thomas R. Benner, clerk in the grocery store of H. C. Baney, who has been confined to his bed for the last three weeks with a very severe attack of erysipelas, is, we are pleased to say, convalescing, and is again able to be down town He expects to be able, in the course of a few days, to be at his post in the store.

It is estimated that there are 20,000 more women in Washington than men.

Coal Oil or Petroleum.

Naphtha (Petroleum) is derived from the Persian word Napata, to exude, and was originally applied to an inflamable liquid hydrocarbon (or rather a mixture of several hydrocarbons) which exudes from the soil in certain parts of Persia.

The term is, however, now used not only to designate a similar and almost identical fluid that issues from the ground in many parts of the world, and is known as petroleum, rock oil, etc,, but is also applied to other liquids, which resemble true napatha in little else than in their volatility.

Native petroleum or rock oil is found in many parts of the world, as in Japan, Burmah, Persia. The shores of the Caspian sea, Siberia, Italy, France and North America. It is of various degrees of consistency, from a thin light colorless fluid found in Persia to a substance as thick as butter and nearly as heavy as water. But all kinds when rectified have nearly the same constitution. They contain no oxygen, and consist of carbon and hydrogen only. From a very early period in Persia and Japan native naphtha has been used to burn in lamps. Prominent among the wonders of our time however, as regards new fields of industry and wealth, stand the discoveries of petroleum fields of the United States principally in our State of Pennsylvania some of these sources of native naphtha were known to the Indians, by whom it was at one time collected for sale; but it is only about thirty years since by sinking deep wells, the great extent of oil bearing strata becomes known. Other regions in North America produce it but our Pennsylvania fields yields six or seven times as much as all the rest put together, It was known to the Jesuit Missionaries in 1627 as a natural curiosity, and was spoken of in the 18th century as seneca oil, from the Seneca Indians in New York, who kindled it in their religious ceremonies, Much curiosity exists in relation to the origin of these great sources of petroleum. It seems to be the general opinion of geologists that it has in most cases been produced by the decomposition of both vegetable and animal matter. It would appear that the oil in our state proceeds from shales of carboniferous age; the Canadian from those of devonian age. In both places the oil is found in cavities in sand stone, and has therefore been derived from subjacent rocks. It is now known that this oil has formed in rocks of nearly all geological ages. In 1859 the first oil wells were bored in our state, and that year 82,000 barrels were produced. In 1861 two million barrels; and in 1879 six hundred million gallons. The year before the value of the product exported was $46,000,000. This great wealth has come to us within the memory of young men of our times. We keep at the Eureka Grocery two qualities of this product one we designate coal oil which is of 120 degrees heat test, and the other is Head Light, both of these brands are perfectly safe, will not explode under any heat that they would be subjected to in common use. There is however four cents difference in the price. Our oil is the very best in the market. This is all we need to say about Eureka oil, as we have so often told you before, a full line of all kinds of Groceries, fresh and new. We are receiving new supplies every day, and as fast as we learn there is a demand for anything that we may not have we get it. We are determined to keep what the people want, and to sell it as low as anyone else can. We defy competition as to quality or price.

KILLED BY CLAIM JUMPERS.

Three Men Said to Have Been Murdered at Guthrie—Vigilantes Looking for the Assassins — Land Speculation Already at Fever Heat.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan., April 24.—A special from Guthrie says that three men who took claims there Monday were foully murdered about 5 o'clock by claim jumpers. The names of the assailants and their victims could not be learned. A vigilance committee is now scouring the country in search of the miscreants, who, it is said, will be summarily dealt with if caught.

Interesting Events of the First Day.

GUTHRIE, Oklahoma, April 24.—Dealers in real estate began business Monday before 2 o'clock in the afternoon. One enterprising dealer had as a background for the safe transaction of business a stock of rifles which had been placed there by the government troops on duty at the land office. Near by was the tent of United States Marshal Needles. The tent was surmounted by a large American flag.

When the second and third sections of the train had arrived nearly everything in sight had been taken, and the only recourse left to those disappointed in securing lots was to buy out such holders of lots as were willing to sell or run the risk of taking outside the legal limit. Both courses were adopted, and a good number of Guthrie City lots changed hands.

The First Sale.

The first sale was made by a man named R. C. Rummels, of Malvan, Kan., who sold a fine twenty-five foot front lot near the land office for $5 to an old doctor, a resident of one of the Indian reservations adjoining Oklahoma. The purchaser refused $50 for the lot five minutes later. Several transfers were made, and others who were determined to locate here drove stakes outside the town line. This is preparatory to the purchase of homesteaders' rights and extension of the city limits.

Guthrie already has its Main street, its Harrison street, its Guthrie avenue and its Oklahoma avenue, and Monday morning it was a wilderness where the antelope sported and the jack rabbit flapped its ears in the sun. In the afternoon at 4 o'clock the first municipal election occurred.

First Municipal Election.

The election notice appeared in The Oklahoma Herald, a daily paper published at Guthrie, on the first day of its existence. A council was elected at the same time. Nearly 10,000 votes were polled, as there are about that many men in Guthrie with the intention of becoming citizens. The leading candidates for mayor were Adjt. Reice, of Illinois; William Constantine, of Springfield, O., and T. L. Sumner, of Arkansas City. A strong dark horse is T. Volney Haggatt, of Huron, D.T.

The Bank of Oklahoma opened for business at Guthrie, Monday, with a capital stock of $50,000. N. W. Levy, the Wichita banker, is president; George W. Robinson, the banker of Winfield, and Hon. Horace Speed, of Indianapolis, directors.

All Businesses Represented.

The new city is flooded with business cards of all descriptions, representing every line of trade and business, every profession and every occupation imaginable.

A mass of mail is expected to reach the Guthrie postoffice every day. It is now being run by a postal clerk for that purpose, but Mr. Flynn, of Kiowa, Kan., lately appointed postmaster, will take charge in a day or two.

A Corner in Town Lots.

The scheme which resulted in the practical cornering of town lots originated with the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad, probably in combination with the syndicate who have been hard at work in Arkansas City for a week or more past. Numbers of men have been going into the territory as deputy marshals and others under permits of being railroad employes.

The marshals were simply commissioned, and not sworn, and the railroad men were not burdened with official orders. They all did their work, and did it well. Officials in the Guthrie land office say that men seemed to spring out of the earth as noon approached and that it did not take fifteen minutes to occupy half the town site. The first homestead entry at the Guthrie office was a soldier claimant named Johnson, a Kansan.

At King Fisher.

The land office at King Fisher was not opened Monday, but advices from there by stage to Guthrie reported an orderly colonizing of the town, which is to be a rival of Guthrie in the territory. Everything is reported quiet along the Canadian. Purcell is a deserted village, and now a little station on the Atchison road about eight miles north of it is laid out as a town site. It is evident that Oklahoma is to be opened peaceably and without bloodshed. The crisis has passed.

The great number of her citizens are law abiding, and those who are not will be suppressed by the strong hand of frontier justice, aided by military authority under command of Gen. Merritt, who has established his headquarters at Oklahoma City. There are now about 500 troops in the territory, and they will be kept here until order is assured.

Interlopers Try to Run Things.

In defiance of the fact that no town was supposed to exist until noon, the several hundred interlopers held an organization meeting at 10 o'clock. H. A. Pierce, one of the Topeka crowd, secured the presidency, but when he tried to foist his plat upon the meeting he was beaten amid the cries, "Down the Topeka outfit." The railway runs southwesterly past the town, and it was proposed to lay out the streets on direct right angles with the track, but a plan with north and south and east and west sections was adopted.

This was proposed by George H. Clayton, of Arkansas, brother of Congressman Powell Clayton and twin of the lately assassinated congressional candidate. It was decided that a town lot shall be 30x140 feet, and that the streets shall be 80 feet wide, except two 100 feet intersecting avenues, which were named respectively Munford avenue, for Doc Munford, of Kansas City, and Harrison avenue for the president.

A Bonanza for the Lawyers.

Meanwhile the whole town site was homesteaded repeatedly. Forty applications under this right of public domain were filed at the land office, and some very beautifully complicated lawsuits will follow. It looks only fair that those who were there in advance of the authorized hour, and who grabbed the land for the corporation that backs them, should be dispossessed and the whole town site placed in the fair and even reach of all.

Guthrie Will Probably Be Short Lived.

It is almost certain, however, that for all its present prestige—for everything is going to Guthrie—there can never be a town of any importance here. The surrounding country is sterile, and with the exception of small pieces of bottom land it can grow nothing but buffalo grass and cactus. The adjacent stream is small and alkaline and well water deep and scarce. The temperature ranges from blighting cold to withering heat, and there are long periods of drought and irregular occasions of floods and hurricanes.

As the sun went down little tents and unsheltered men dotted the region over an area large enough for an eastern metropolis. There is covering for about 1,000 persons on a liberal estimate, and the nights, after the roasting days, are quite chilly. Whether it rains or not, great suffering must be endured by the thousands of unsheltered.

Eager to Get Homes.

Almost with the first rush of home seekers from the cars, the home seekers who had started across the Oklahoma north line at noon in wagons and on horses began to pour into the new city. Their horses were reeking wet from the hot and furious drive. They took possession of such town lots in the future Oklahoma metropolis as they could lay claim to. Meanwhile the land office was besieged by an eager and determined crowd of men waiting to file claims upon homesteads.

As the afternoon wore on this crowd grew larger, until, at closing time, it reached in a regular line far down the street towards the railroad station. Business in the land office went rather slowly. The register and receiver did the best they could, but the pressure upon them was tremendous. The men who were waiting to file claims were forced into line two abreast.

The Rush from Arkansas City.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan., April 24.—When the first train arrived at Guthrie from Arkansas City, the embryo streets and lots of the new city had already been laid out by enterprising citizens who had been early on the scene. Hardly had the cars slowed down at the station when eager men leaped from the car windows, slipped from the roof of the coaches and poured out of the doors in streams.

In a minute the slope leading up from the station was black with men rushing headlong, eager for the coveted town lots. In two minutes not one of the men who had filled the train was left within speaking distance of the railway.

Work for the Land Office.

By the time this crowd had reached the top of the slope near the land office, men who had been running parallel lines for streets and driving in stakes for town lots were well on their way along the level strip of land east of the land office. The crowd then caught the moving line of streets and lots and rushed eastward at a tremendous rate.

The men who brought along a muslin sign bearing the words "Bank of Guthrie" were compelled to take up a lot one mile back of the station. The next train arriving from Arkansas City brought a thousand home seekers ten minutes later.

An Army of Home Seekers.

The men in this train hurried across the prairie like an army charging the wing of the enemy. They spread out north and south, with axes and spades and stakes, and began with wonderful energy the location of lots and streets. The third, fourth, fifth and sixth trains from Arkansas City swelled the number to as many thousands.

When the seventh and eighth trains came in later in the afternoon, the crowd had overflowed all bounds. On the east the streets and town lots had been extended fully two miles, on the north a mile and a half, and on the south nearly a mile. No attempt had been made to lay out a town on the west side of the track. This west land had been all filed on for homesteads.

The Armes Court Martial.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—At the Armes court martial Col. Canaday, sergeant-at-arms of the senate, was one of the witnesses, and it is said his evidence caused quite a sensation. It is inferred from this that his testimony corroborated that which Col. Swords is supposed to have given on Saturday—that Armes was not only appointed an aid on the staff off the grand marshal, but had been designated a special body guard to the president. Later on the testimony taken in secret session was read.

No Sunday Freight in Canada.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., April 24.—In deference to the wishes of the Ministerial association, which some time ago started a provincial agitation for the reduction of Sunday traffic on the railways, Superintendent Morford has issued an order to the effect that in future Sunday freight traffic on the Michigan Central railway through Canada will be discontinued.

Fatal Struggle with Officers.

MT. CARMEL, Pa., April 24.—Borough officers who had arrested several drunken Hungarians for disorderly conduct were attacked by other Hungarians, who attempted a rescue. During the fight which ensued John Shorns, a Hungarian, was killed, and others were seriously injured. A dozen Hungarians were finally lodged in the police station.

No Poles on Broadway Now.

NEW YORK, April 24.—By 10 o'clock in the morning the mayor's order to remove telegraph poles from Broadway had been obeyed to the letter. The last pole to fall on that thoroughfare was at the corner of Twenty-fifth street. Two big poles on the corner of Forty-second street and Sixth avenue, fully 100 feet high, were also removed.

Durango's Treasurer Defaults.

DURANGO, Colo., April 24.—T. F. Burgess, the treasurer of this place, is a defaulter to the extent of $12,000. On a promise of being released from custody he paid over to the city a certificate of deposit for $3,800. When released he at once set out for New Mexico. Officers are on his trail.

Robbed a Safe and Confessed.

ELKHART, Ind., April 24.—The safe in the law office of Hubbell & Conley was robbed Sunday night and notes and money amounting to $5,000 taken. George Jones, a young colored man, has been arrested for the crime and confessed it.

STORY OF THE RESCUE.

Passengers of the Danmark Tell Their Experiences.

TWO FIRES ON THE SHIP.

The Machinery Was Constantly Breaking Down and Things Were in a Bad Way on Board When the Missouri Came Along.

PHILADELPHIA, April 24.—Additional details of the accident which caused the loss of the Danmark are given here. Charles Lorup, who, with his wife, was a passenger on the Danmark, said:

"We had been out but a few days when a fire was discovered in the coal bunkers, which was promptly extinguished, and a couple of days later it was found that there was another fire in the same place. I thought that they were of incendiary origin, but although I tried to find out, I was unable to do so. There were numerous stoppages caused by the breaking of the machinery, which were almost a daily occurrence, and the delays lasted from one to eight hours.

Breaking of the Propeller Shaft.

"On the 4th of April, after having been out fifteen days, the propeller shaft broke at about half-past 3 in the afternoon and the water began to work its way into the vessel. By 10 o'clock in the evening it had risen to a height of nearly two feet in the fire room, making it almost impossible for the firemen to attend to their duty, and for a while it looked as if the fires would be put out. It was nearly 12 o'clock when the chief engineer was instantly killed by being hit on the head with a part of the machinery. I at once notified some of the officers and helped them to carry the dead engineer to his state room.

Ignorant of Their Danger.

"From the time the Danmark broke her shaft until the next morning none of the passengers knew of the danger the ship was in, as the pumps were kept working so as to make it appear that she was running along and doing her regular work. This illusion was dispelled in the morning and a little excitement prevailed, but was quieted by the officers and sailors telling the passengers that the vessel was right in the path of the ocean steamers and it would probably not be long before one of them would be seen. About 12 o'clock on April 5 the Missouri was sighted. We displayed our signal of distress, to which they answered, and when near enough a small boat was put off from the Missouri and succeeded in getting a towing line to us. He was obliged to let go a day or so afterwards, and then we were taken on board of the Missouri. Before casting off the lines the passengers of the Danmark were transferred by lifeboats to the side of the Missouri, where they were hoisted aboard in a boatswain chair."

A Passenger's Story.

Ives Petersen, a sailor, who has lived several years in this country and had gone home to visit his friends, was one of the rescued passengers. "We got along very well for several days before the shaft was broken," he said, "but two or three times we stopped for some repairs to the machinery. At last, on the afternoon of April 4, the shaft broke and threw a hole through the vessel. We didn't know exactly what was the matter, and pretty soon after the men began using the pumps. The next morning we heard that the chief engineer had been killed during the night and we were in bad heart when he was buried. The carpenter tried to stop the leak. Towards afternoon we sighted the Missouri. She came up close and passed a hawser to us, taking the Danmark in tow. Then we headed for the Azores. The Missouri pulled us for about eighteen hours, when the officers of the Danmark found that they couldn't keep her afloat any longer, so it was determined to transfer the passengers to the Missouri.

The Transfer to the Missouri.

"We got into the boats and all were put safely aboard, the sailors of the Missouri pulling us up in slings. It was rough, but there was a long swell on the ocean that prevented the boats from going close to the ship. I tell you we were thankful to feel a sound vessel under our feet once more. The passengers behaved splendidly. I didn't see any man or woman break down, and yet some, when they reached the Missouri, just sank down on their knees and began praying. I guess the most didn't realize the danger we were in. The captain and all the crew of the Danmark are true sailors, and did all they knew how to save the vessel. As for the officers and men of this ship, I can only say God bless them, and if they are ever in such straits, may they find just such rescuers."

They Lose Their All.

Annie Brun and her sister, Louise, both modest Danish girls, spoke pathetically of the disaster. "No, I have no money," said Annie. "My money went down with the Danmark. We saved nothing," she said; "just the clothes we had on and what we could wear besides. Oh, when I was swung up the side of the Missouri it looked awful to see the big waves down below, but everybody has been so kind to my sister and me, and now we are almost there."

The Purser Talks.

The purser of the Danmark, C. H. Hempel, gave this official account of the disaster: "At 3:25 in the afternoon of April 4, in rather stormy weather, the shaft of the Danmark broke. The free end began thrashing around the bottom of the vessel and started a leak. We set the sails and stopped the engine, but kept the pumps going. A broken propeller shaft alone is not at all serious. Scores of steamers have got safely to port with broken shafts. But of course the water began to pour in through the hole, and we couldn't keep it out with the bulkheads and pumps. Nobody knows what made the shaft break. It was well made and had been carefully inspected. The water was so deep in the engine room that the cranks of the engine dipped into it at every revolution of the pumps. That kept a steady stream flying through the engine room, which after a while put out the lantern and left the place in darkness. About 7 o'clock Chief Engineer Kaase came into the engine room to look at the condenser, which is a very important part of the machinery. In the darkness he probably stumbled and fell against the crank, which struck him on the head and killed him instantly. His body was found lying on the floor."

In New York.

NEW YORK, April 24.—The offices of the Thingvalla line, at No. 13 State street, were crowded this morning with many of the rescued passengers of the Danmark, who had come to this city from Philadelphia, reaching here at an early hour. Many friends of the rescued people were there, too, and the happy chatter of voices was unceasing. Congratulations were uttered in English, Danish and Swedish.

SINNEMAHONING.

WHICH IS IN CAMERON COUNTY, PA., —EASY TIMES, INDIAN SCALPS AND BURNINGS AT THE STAKE, MODERN EVENTS, ETC.

There is a place called Sinnemahone,
Of which but little good is known.
For Sinning Ill must be its fame,
Since Sin begins its very name.
So well indeed its fame is known,
That people now think they should begin
To drop the useless word Mahone
And call the country simply Sin.

So sang Preacher Thompson some fifty year ago who came here as a missionery, but failed in his task. If his angelic spirit could view this country at the present day he would be inclined to sing:

Sinnemahoning is indeed a strange name
And implies a slander base,
For of Sin there's scarcely a vestige left
In this high-toned, moral place.

Suppose we cast the Sin aside
And call it Belle Mahone,
And thus in name as well as fact
Improve our moral tone.

Near this place occurred a fight between some of Brady's scouts and a party of Indians in which a Mr. Ross was taken prisoner by the latter and burned alive at the stake.

In 1871 at the mouth of Grove's Run, Michael Grove crept upon three Indians when asleeep and killed the whole party with his little hatchet.

Near this locality were also the haunts of those bold robbers, Lewis and Conly, and where they were captured.

Our people have evoluted out of the state of sin, mentioned by the poets and a more moral intelligent and industrious people cannot be found in any other part of the the state, than are those dwelling on the borders of the classic river, Sinnemahoning.

MOUNTAIN BOY.

After using Ely's Cream Balm two months I was surprised and delighted to find that the right nostril, which was closed up entirely for over twenty years, was open and free as the other, and can use it now as I could not do for many years. I feel very thankful.—R. H. Cressingham, 275 18th St., Brooklyn.

From the pastor of the Olivet Baptist church, Philadelphia, Pa: I was so much troubled with catarrh it seriously affected my voice. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm did the work. My voice is fully restored. B. F. Lionsnan.

It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by W. C. Keplinger & Co.

Judge George C. Wing

of Auburn, one of Maine's prominent lawyers, and for several years the Chairman of the Republican State Committee, was troubled with boils on the back of his neck in their worst form, resembling carbuncles. Three bottles of Brown's Sarsaparilla completely cured him, and now Judge Wing speaks in the highest praise of Brown's Sarsaparilla.

The long sought for remedy for spring lassitude has been found. Entirely free from the noxious alcohols, it is compounded of these ingredients which extended medical experience has proven to be the most potential in their effect upon the kidneys, liver and blood, and, unlike the common "spring medicines" with which the market is flooded, its effect is not only immediate, but enduring. No stronger evidence to this effect could be offered than the voluntary testimony to its virtues of men of the character and position of those whose names appear with their willing permission through all our works. Men, women and children alike can take it with safety, and for ladies who are peculiarly susceptible to that tired feeling at this season of the year we advise the use of Twelve Pieces of Bone.

I had catarrh twenty-five years. Twelve pieces of bone, two of them over an inch long, came from my nose. My front teeth dropped out while perfectly sound, and my dreadful suffering need not be told. Two years ago I took four bottles of S. S. S. and I improved from the start. It made me well, and I have been well every since.

Fatal Poison.

For years I was afflicted with Poisoned Blood, which, it seemed, would result fatally, as nothing seemed to benefit me at all. At length I found myself in bed, a complete wreck. My body swollen out of proportion, covered with scales, and the pains and itching made life almost unendurable. The physicians failed to do me any good, and I was about to give up in despair when I began taking Swift's Specific. This medicine has cured me sound and well, and nothing else did it but S. S. S.

Large size packages, 50 cents. At all druggists'.

The Verdict Unanimous.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism for 10 years standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all disease of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at W. C. Do You Want a Fence?

READ THIS—And give it a moment's reflection. Think of a fence that is at once handsome and practically indestructible.

AND YET—Is cheaper than a wooden fence and twice as cheap as the cheapest iron fence.

THE ONLY—Fence that protects and ornaments a lawn without concealing it.

OUR fence is very much cheaper than any other that can approach it in merit.

WHY, we will sell you our handsome strong steel picket fence for as little as it costs, in most towns, to paint a wooden fence.

DO not for a moment think of buying a fence until you have seen ours.

THIS beautiful and handsome fence can already be seen at Mr. Ellis Orvis' or Mr. Edwin P. Garman's, on Linn St., Bellefonte.

PRICES and particulars can be learned of A. B. Lucas at Erhard & Shuey's store, on High street, until further notice.

I will be in Bellefonte the first week of every month until further notice.

Seizing Lower CalifOrnia.

A FORMER BELLEFONTE MAN TELLS THE STORY OF THE GREAT CONSPIRACY.

The Latest Filibustering Scheme, Life on the Barren Strip, the Outcome.

THE TRUE INWARDNESS OF THE SECRET ORDER OF THE KNIGHTS OF THE FIELD OF THE CLOTH OF GOLD.

Special Correspondence.

MATANZAS, April 1st.

You have doubtless heard of the new order of the Knights of the Field of the Cloth of Gold. It is something like the famous, but luckless Knights of the Golden Circle before the war. Many of its members are members of the Golden Circle. The leader is a man who has had one of the most romantic histories. He has been a filibuster all his life. When Walker defied President Fillmore and led his band of desperadoes and adventurers to Central America he was with it. He cast his fortunes with the Texans in their successful war for independence. His lot was thrown in with Lopez when the latter was pushing his Cuban scheme. He has lead that restless roving life that unfits a man for business life, for honest ways and now gray-headed but enthusiastic, he is pushing what is practically a forlorn hope. The headquarters of the order are in New York. The backer is said to be a famous Irish banker who has in the past backed several similar schemes.

Lower California, or as it is properly called Old California is that strip of barren land which lies between the gulf of California and the Pacific ocean. It is 750 miles long, varying in width from thirty miles to 150. The surface is almost entirely a desert. All attempts that have ever been made to colonize it have unvariably proven failures, although several Dominican missions still exist that have been planted there in the early part of the seventeenth century. Pearl-fishing is the principal industry of the few natives who are chiefly mestizoes or half breeds. The interior consists of volcanic mountain ranges which give abundant evidences of the presence of minerals such as gold, silver, platinum, iron, copper and salt.

Californians have long looked upon the barren peninsula with covetuos eyes. Very large branches of the Knights exist in the chief cities. Its membership is confined, however, to politicians, land agents, or boomers and the average crowd that follows such mo ements. The Ensenada gold excitement added to the movement somewhat so t at at the lowest estimate there are 400 members in the city of Los Angelos alone. The Americans in the Mexican cities are generally in favor of the movement.

The scheme is to colonize the peninsula, not to make an armed invasion but to send small parties in to settle and prospect and then at the proper moment plan an uprising, wrest the control of the country from the sparse and mongrel population, that claim their independence, hand the country over to the United States as a territory or a state and thus repeat the history of the annexation of Texas.

Owing to the lawless population of the border it is more than probable that the scheme will come to an head no matter what may be the opinion of the more law-abiding people of the United States. Certain it is that Mexico is gradually mobilizing her army toward the Pacific slope and that Matanzas Guaymas and Acapulca are being regarrisoned and that the little missions on the Peninsula are being strengthened. The boomers will meet with the most violent opposition from Mexico and if they insist the chances are that the Peninsula question will become a very vexed one.

There are many Pennsylvanians now prospecting in lower California and I think with few exceptions they are opposed to the scheme. J. M.

The Comrades' Tribute to Bond Valentine.

At a special meeting of Gregg Post, No. 95, D. of Pa., held in respect to the sudden death of our late comrade, Bond Valentine, in order that expression might be given the heartfelt sympathy of this Post, the following was adopted:

Insomuch as it hath pleased God to call away from amongst us a comrade of this Post and a citizen honored and esteemed;

Resolved, That we keep ever fresh in our memories the character and feilowship of our comrade, the late Bond Valentine, who slept peacefully away on Friday morning last, to awake in the morning land. He was a man worthy of emulation by his comrades and others; a Christian of highest character, in whom the best attributes of a good man spoke out for themselves; and, though he has sought to hide in his characteristic modesty, his generous deeds, that charity and humility which crowned his life must find him out. Like the sun, a man's glory cannot be suppressed. Comrade Valentine's was a life pure, devoted, humble. He was a strong man and therefore bore his own burdens, and, when the truth is some day revealed, it may be found that he shouldered many a comrade's knapsack along the eternal march which leads to "Gates Ajar" and begins here upon the earth.

Let us dwell upon this man now, resolved not to forget him, nor to let him be forgotten, but to number him with those specially mourned by the Grand Army, looking forward to each "Memori al Day" as a time when, as an emblem of peace we offer to him a flower, he may turn for an instant from the joys of Heaven to remember us. Not forgetting the friends nor orphaned sons in their bereavement, let us say—Amen.

THE SAD AND SERIOUS, THE BRIGHT AND JOYFUL HAPPENINGS AT SNOW SHOE TOLD BY A REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

The Democrats out here all admit that we have had delightful weather since the republicans have taken charge of the weather bereau. Just to think what disagreeable weather in March and April —one year ago.

Mr. Enoch Midlam and family of Pine Glenn will move to Washington Territory in a few weeks.

Miss Laura Lucas will teach the summer free school at Snow Shoe. The school commenced Monday, the 22d.

It is reported here that Mr. Daniel Calihan was suddenly killed near Harrisburg a few days ago. Mr. Calihan was coke boss at the Sugar Camp coke ovens for several years and moved away from Snow Shoe last summer.

Wm. Shunkweiler, the enterprising blacksmith, is building an addition to his residence.

Mr. Robert Lucas is hard at work fixing up our roads. It is the general opinion that Robert will make a model supervisor.

Mr. William McDowel, who is a student at State College, paid a visit to his father and mother on Sunday.

Miss Maggie Whiteman, who has been living in Philipsburg for some time, came home on a visit last Saturday.

The girl that lives on the corner says she don't believe in letting her fellow chew all the front palings off these cold night when there is a war n room inside with no one in it.

Mrs. James Quick, of Moshannon, died Saturday morning at 6 a. m. of childbed fever, and was buried on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock in Askey grave yard.

O. M. Sheets, the butcher, received a handsome refrigerator Saturday. It is one of the best make with all the latest improvements, and has two separate apartments—one for whole quarters and the other for smaller pieces,

The school at Moshannon, taught by Mr. Frank Brown, gave a very interesting entertainment last Thursday evening, that was entirely too well attended for the comfort of all concerned. The people were packed together like sardines in a box with the thermometer 100 in the shade, yet strange to say none of the girls complained.

All the young ladies in Gillentown
And many more for miles around
For many a day will not forget
The squeeze they got that night, you bet.

Robt. T, Haynes, Esq., accompanied Mr. Frank Lucas to Philadelphia on Wednesday morning, where Mr. Lucas will receive treatment for brain trouble, from which he has been suffering for several years—the result of a fall. Previous to this misfortune he was a sober and industrious man and provided well for his family, but now they are] entirely destitute and depend on others for their support. President Roberts, of the P. R. R., did a worthy act when he furnished a pass to take Mr. Lucas to Philadelphia and return.

On Thursday and Friday night of last week the mountains east of Show Shoe presented a wierd appearance. Several terrible forest fires were raging on as many different mountains. The rain storm on Saturday put all the fires out. The town of Snow Shoe is comparatively safe as the land in the immediate vicinity has nearly all been cleared up for farming purposes.

BELGIUM'S first notice to Boulanger that he must refrain from political agitation while in Brussels was not taken much notice of. The Government has now decided to warn him that he will not be allowed to conspire against France, a nation friendly to Belgium. This second notice is in response to an intimation from Pari that the French Government regards the activity of the Boulangists in Belgium as belonging to the pernicious variety. The General will either have to shut up or leave.

COURT CULLINGS.

W. J. SINGER BEGINS PRACTICE AND EX JUDGE FRANK IS MADE FOREMAN OF GRAND JURY.

On Monday morning the hands on the court room clock began their journey around. This was proof that it was Court week. The morning trains brought hundreds of people to town. Here was indication of much business. It is not likely, however, that much of it is of great importance.

The opening of the April term of court was in the usual form. Hon. A O Furst, P. J., and Hon. C. Munson and Hon. Daniel Rhoads his associates, occupied the judicial bench, making it the most dignified and imposing Court in the State—equal to any, too, in avoirdupois.

Upon motion of C M Bower, Esq., W J Singer, who has been a law student in the office of Orvis, Bower & Orvis, was sworn and admitted to practice in the several courts of Centre county, Mr. Singer is a bright, goodlooking young gentleman with a graceful mustache and should have his share of legal practice.

After a few motions were made the Court adjourned until 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

The Grand Jury was called and absentees noted, four of them being marked absent. Hon. Samuel Frank, a prominent citizen of Rebersburg, was sworn as foreman of the Grand Jury. The Court charged them in the usual form.

When the names of Traverse Jurors were called seven were absent.

Pending the finding of true bills by the Grand Jury the case of Martin Gates vs. Platt; Barber & Co. was taken up, the jury called being John W Sellers, Lewis Elliott, Geo. L Smith, J P Shope, U L Rishel, Samuel Ard, James Whittaker, Wm. J Meyer, Jerome Spigelmeyer, Sol Poorman, C C Cowell and J A Harris. The case was not completed when Court adjourned until 9 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Two cases were settled on Monday, viz.,

E A Fancher vs. Andrew Immel, an appeal from January term, 1888. Plea, non assumpsit, Hastings & Reeder for plaintiff; Spangler & Hewes for defense.

Wm. Rhyne vs. David Robb. Appeal from April term, 1888 Plea, non assumpsit, Fortney representing the plaintiff.

Tuesday's record in Court includes the following:

The case of Martyn & Gates vs Platt, Barker & Co. was concluded on Tuesday morning by a verdict given for the defendant.

John B. Linn, Esq., was appointed auditor to destribute money arising from the sale of personal property of the Bellefonte Glass Company among persons who are legally entitled thereto.

Commonwealth vs Wm. H. Mock, larceny. The defendant plead "not guilty." Tried by jury. Found guilty.

Commonwealth vs Jacob Koch surety, of peace. Cause heard. Defendant sentenced by the Court to pay cost of prosecution.

Commonwealth vs William Witmer, malicious mischief. Defendant pleads not guilty. Tried by jury, defendant found not guilty, but pay the cost.

Commonwealth vs Levi Quick, f & b. Grand jury return ignoramus. County pay the costs.

Commonwealth vs William Mulberger, f. & b. Settled by giving bond to Potter township in sum of $400.

Commonwealth vs Milton Herman, larceny. Grand jury return ignoramus.

Commonwealth vs Abram Mills, larceny—stealing money and watch from Thos Sheldon. Defendant pleads not guilty. Tried by jury and changed his plea to "guilty."

Commonwealth vs. Miss Maggie Bosch and Frank Bosch, selling liquor without license. Grand jury return true bill.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, has no other preparation ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

We shall never cease to indorse Dr Bulls' Cough Syrup: for without it our paper would have been short of reading matter this week. We had a shocking cough and a fearful cold. (Weekly Union.)

Don't sigh with pains or burns or incident. But use Salvation Oil, the greatest liniment.

William P. Orbison, of Huntington, found in the attic of his residence the other day a deed 113 years old. It is dated 1776, and was made by William Smith, of Philadelphia, in favor of Benjamin Elliot, giving the latter title to a lot of ground in Huntington, then in Bedford county, and now owned by H. B. Dunn and John W. Mattern, Esqs.

POOR BUT HONEST.

Charlie Sullevan is a poor but honest Irish lad, who, while walking down Washington street, found a wallet containing checks and money to the value of several hundred dollars. Although almost destitute, he returned it to its owners, Messrs. A P Ordway & Co., proprietors of Sulphur Bitters, who gave him a liberal reward, and also give him six bottles of Sulphur Bitters for his mother, who has been a terrible sufferer with rheumatism, and who returned many blessings after being cured by their use.—Weekly World.

On Friday Mrs. Z. D. Miles received a telegram telling her that her father-in-law, Mr. E. Tipton, the well known undertaker of Altoona, had fallen from a building which he was moving and was seriously injured. Mrs. Miles departed on the 10.30 train Saturday morning.

Last week we mentioned that J. Miles Green had found iron ore on his land. On Tuesday afternoon the prospectors struck the main seam. As yet the depth of ore has not been determined. They are down two feet in the seam and have made another drift further down the hill in order to drain and determine the depth.

Last Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock the funeral of Mrs. Maria Stanley took place, the remains being interred in the Advent cemetery. The funeral services were held in the Advent church, Rev. Vanderhercher officiating.

WHAT TO DO WITH YOUR DAUGHTERS.

"MATTHEW TWAIN'S" ADVICE ON THIS SUBJECT IS NEW, NOVEL AND ENTERTAINING.

Written for the Daily News.

This is a question that seems to be taking some attention in our day. Of course, there may be a few persons who are not deeply interested in the subject, but yet the number is small.

As our married life has not brought us any of the article the subject has not caused us any particular uneasiness; but for the benefit of those parents whose daughters are not all sons,as in our case, we beg leave to offer a few suggestions.

In the first place, if you have no daughters don't worry yourselves sick about what other people will do with theirs.

There was a time in our life when we were greatly interested in what people would do with their daughters—whether they would let them spend about six evenings out of the week with us, or send them to bed when we came in the front gate.

But as this time is past we are unable to be of much use in helping parents to manage their daughters.

Of course, if we were not married we would, with our usual generosity, relieve some father and mother of some cause for worry, but this would be only a drop in the bucket.

The daughters of to day differ somewhat from the daughters of one hundred or even fifty years ago. They are more costly and valuable to their parents because of the money it takes to keep them in finery.

This is the reason why fathers and mothers have decided that the best thing in the world to do with their daughters is to marry them off as soon as possible.

The suggestions to be offered in this case depend altogether on the age of the daughter. If she is under fifteen we would suggest that she be kept in the cradle, and if she is over that age put her to scrubbing the backporch at once, and not let her stop until she is married. After that her husband will see to keeping her busy.

Mothers make mistakes sometimes in not allowing their daughters to assist them in their fancy work, music and painting.

Of course, as a rule daughters do not care for such hard work, but prefer the lighter kind, such as washing, baking, ironing, etc.

It is a pitiful, yet a very common sight to see poor, old and even delicate mothers worrying their lives out entertaining company in the parlor, while their daughters are scrubbing the cellar stairs—and mothers should not allow their daughters to do such work. You need exercise, mothers. Go out into God's beautiful sunlight and enjoy a good day's washing, and let your poor, overworked daughters dress themselves uf and lift your heavy burden from your shoulders by playing the piano and entertaining their own company. This work won't hurt them. It may make them very tired, but they are young and should have a share of the hard work.

Parents are to blame some times and we do not wonder that they are at loss now and then to know what to do with their daughters. They do not understand right or they would know that there are many times when the poor daughters are at loss to know just what to do with their parents.

When you were young,mothers, if you remember you often were at loss to know just what to do with your parents on Saturday night. Have you not often waited anxiously to see your father wind the clock?

We have seen the time when we would have given our last nickel to see some daughter's parents take a good yawn and follow each other us the winding stairs and leave that daughter and ourself to silence, darkness and solitude.

There is a time in every daughter's life when she prefers solitude if not silence to any light that may be allowed to shine and we would suggest right there that you make arrangements at once to give your daughters a few hours of solitude at least two evenings out of each week.

It may not be well to leave them alone at such a time, but allow them to select some gentlemen of their choice (mind we say their choice) to remain a few hours with them after you have retired and you can take our word for it that you will not be at loss any length of time to know what to do with your daughters.

Remember your daughters need this solitude. You needed it and no doubt often got it when you were young. If you cannot afford to furnish solitude for your daughters let them purchase it for themselves. They invariably find it, but some times not of the best kind.

If your daughters want to get married why let them do so, even if the man they marry is a scamp. If you think he is a villian why don't try to make every one else think as you do. Take him into your family and convert him He won't eat much and you will not mind keeping one more.

Any way parents have no right to try to interfere no matter who their daughter marries. Suppose you must keep him and her both? Is not your daughter's happiness worth more to you than what it will cost to keep a husband for her?

When your daughters get married give them a thousand or so to start house-keeping. You will never miss it and you have no idea how it will relieve their poor husband.

If fathers and mothers would allow their daughters to run the streets more frequently and to learn a few of the new flirtation schemes, they would be better off.

You should remember that girls are in the way at home in the evenings, and should insist on them spending more of their time on the streets.

Then again you should not wear all the new clothes that are brought into the family. You should give your daughters a few ribbons and silks now and then when they do stay at home.

We know what you will say to this. Of course, your daughters would rather stay at home in the evenings. But are you not their parents? Can you not see what is best for them? Compell them to go out now and then and get some fresh air. You do not need fresh air one half as bad as your daughters, yet you spend all your evenings out.

One thing about the matter is, that your daughters are never ungrateful for favors. They will be as greatly pleased with a box of hair pins as they will with a seal skin coat and they are not half so expensive.

Girls should never be sent to a school where they are not allowed any fun. It stunts their intellect and spoils their future life.

After they come back if you think they are as intelligent as necessary why tell them so and do not keep the poor creatures at school any longer than really necessary.

Do not blame them for wanting to get back into the kitchen sometimes,remember this is their nature. They love work and you should not compell the poor creatures to stay in the hammock when they want to be in the wash tub.

You should give them at least three weeks time after they return, to work in the garden among the Johnny-Jump-Ups and Sweet Williams.

They will desire this and particularly the latter.

Mothers make a mistake in not selecting the right kind of amusements for their daughters. They do not care to do the same things you did fifty years ago.

Dancing, croquette, tennis and such plays have gone out of date. Allow them to try some of the new games such as button, spin the plate, chase the Quaker, love in the dark, knitting, spinning and darning socks. They find more amusement in such things and it is natural that they should.

Your daughters are very liable to become old maids unless you insist upon their getting married. Very few girls get married of their own accord.

Try to impress upon their minds the importance of getting a husband. There is nothing in the world as nice for a young girl as a husband. In fact, they are a nice thing for an old girl, too, but they are not often used in this way.

We think all girls should get married at least once, and it is the duty of parents to see to this matter.

Most any kind of a man is better than none and if your daughter should get a drunken husband why she will be doing no worse than some other person's daughter.

We feel the importance of this step every time we see an old maid and think that if parents would interest themselves more in the welfare of their daughters there would be fewer cats in some households.

Your daughters were never married, and you were. They do not know the enjoyment that is to be found in this state and the golden opportunities open to make fires on cold winter mornings.

One more suggestion and we are done. See to it that your daughters read novels, there is nothing in the world will bring a girl out as much as reading novels (out of bed we mean). She may not take kindly to this, but you should compel your daughters to read one sickly love story every night before she goes to bed, even if she should have to stay up all night to do it. It will add bloom to her cheek and a freshness to her eye that nothing else (unless it should be the afore mentioned solitude) will do.

Educate, amuse, and marry off your daughters, is our advice.

There will always be some one to assist you in performing the latter service for them and the former you can perform without any outside aid.

The world needs all the daughters that are here and has a place for each one.

Of course, some times there are several that desire the same place and then some one must be left. The latter class when they cannot secure a man secure a bird or a cat. Now just why this is we are unable to state.

One thing—we see very little connection in any respect between a cat and a man. We have often thought that there would be a closer connection between some men and a mule, but as a mule would be rather an uncertain thing to love at times we suppose that is why a cat or a bird is chosen.

However, we see no use in parents worrying about their daughters The daughters as a rule do not worry about what is to become of their parents.

There is a man for every woman and if some few do not succeed in getting their allotted share let them get along without. And now, parents, these suggestions are free; accept or reject them as you choose.

The Verdict Unanimous.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism for 10 years standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all disease of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at W. C. My Poor Back!

That "poor back" is held responsible for more than its share of the sufferings of mankind. If your dog bites a man who kicks it, do you blame the dog? On the same principle the kidneys utter their protest against nervousness, impure blood, and resulting constipation. These force them to do extraordinary work in ridding the system of the poisons which are the result of effete matter retained in the blood. Then the sufferer says the back aches; the kidneys are diseased. "Not yet;" but they will be unless the nerves are strengthened, the blood purified, and the constipation removed. These are the causes of kidney troubles, and Paine's Celery Compound removes them quickly. With its tonic, purifying, and laxative effect, it also strengthens the weak kidneys, making it almost infallible in curing all diseases of the nerves and kidneys. If your hopes of cure have not been realized, try Paine's Celery Compound; it gives perfect health to all who complain of "their poor backs." Price $1.00.

PASSED BEYOND.

THE SUDDEN AND PEACEFUL DEATH OF MR. BOND VALENTINE, OF APOPLEXY, AT 6.15 O'CLOCK FRIDAY MORNING.

No event that could have occurred would have more completely startled the people of this community than did the announcement of the death of Mr. Bond Valentine last Friday. It was sudden and peaceful without the least intimation that anything was wrong. Indeed, it is the uniform testimony that Mr. Valentine, always the embodiment of cheerfulness and amiability,was unusually so on Thursday. He was at his business place as usual on Thursday,and was down town talking with friends until 9 o'clock at night. Returning home, he chatted as usual with his relatives and retired about 10 o'clock. He rested peacefully until about 6 o'clock this morning, when one of his sons awoke to hear him breathing in an unusual manner. He called the attention of others to it his friends gathered about his bedside and at 6.15 o'clock his spirit took its flight to the realms beyond. No words of farewell were spoken; perhaps he did not recognize his friends; but a peaceful smile and a look of perfect content is on his features. A blessed death, when one meditates on the profound mystery of parting from this world to enter the abode of light.

It is needless for us to dwell upon the eminent character and excellence of Mr. Bond Valentine. Every citizen knew him and they can point to a life which is unique among men. To be kindly and courteous is Christian, and that Mr. Valentine was in the fullest degree. To be simple and cheerful in manner and life is the closest imitation of the great Examplar and in this he followed Divine teaching. To have an earnest, trusting faith is the most important command enjoined upon us by the Saviour of the world and Bond Valentine could see beyond into the Heavenly Home with the spiritual certainty which made it to him the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things unseen.

Bond Valentine was the son of Abram S. Valentine, one of the early citizens of this place and connected prominently with the important iron firm of the Valentine Brothers. He leaves three brothers—Abram, who lives at Atlantic City, Even, of Philadelphia and Harry, of this place. Mrs. Pugh and Miss Clara Valentine are surviving sisters. Mrs. Stewart Lyon, who died a few years ago, was also his sister. His wife died several years ago and he leaves two sons—Bond and Edmund—and they perhaps of all his numerous relatives will sorrow most deeply, for since the death of their mother they had clung with peculiarly strong attachment to their father. His wife was a Miss Kinney, a sister to the wife of Hon. D. H. Bates, President of the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Company.

The deceased was born at Valentines Iron Works on the 22d day of March, 1834, making him 55 years of age on his last birthday. He had all his life been associated in business in Bellefonte—for a long time with Mr. Shortlidge in the coal, lime and grain trade. Recently he has been the agent of the People's Life Insurance Company of Pittsburg. In business and in society he was companionable and agreeable. He gave his aid and influence to every movement for the benefit of others. His view of the temperance question led him to be, in recent years, an advocate of Prohibition in its strictest sense. His father and most of his relatives were and are members of the Friends Society. His wife was a Methodist, but Mr. Valentine's closest attachment was with the Friends.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Sympathy in Affliction.

At the last regular meeting of Gregg Post, No. 95, G. A. R. Dept., of Penna., George B. Brandon, John Noll and J. M. Armor were appointed a committee to prepare resolutions expressive of the Post's sympathy toward our comrade, D. W. Woodring, in his recent affliction.

The committee reported the following letter:

DEAR COMRADE: You have lost the greatest possible treasure man can lose, viz., a good, faithful wife, and we heartily sympathise with you in your deep affliction.

That He who doeth all things well may comfort you and your motherless children is the heartfelt wish of —Mr. W. T. Twitmire has moved his store from his recent location next the Watchman office into the store room furthest east in the Arcade Block.

—The steam heat was turned off a short time on Thursday morning and some consumers became excited because they thought it was to be permanent.

—Instead of going to Coalport, to which place Mr. A. L. Miller was originally appointed by the Methodist Conference, he will go to the suburbs of Altoona.

—McCalmont & Company are erecting an extensive ware house at their lime kiln. They are also working a very large force of men, which indicates the liveliest sort of business.

—Mrs. Mollie Decker, wife of Samuel Decker, of Zion, died at her home in that place on Thursday morning, of pneumonia. The funeral will take place on Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

—About two hundred gentlemen—among whom were many business men—thronged the comfortable and inviting interior of the Young Men's Christian Association building on Thursday evening.

—The Messrs. John and Thomas Dunkle are about to open a grocery store in the room on Allegheny street recently vacated by Mrs. Whitman as a millinery store. Mr. and Mrs. Whitman and family are going to Philadelphia.

—We observe that Mr. Crissman is having erected a fence around his new residence on Thomas street, a want that has been long and painfully felt. The next thing in order, Mr. Crissman, is a new pavement and trees.

—Of new business enterprises in Bellefonte there is no limit. The latest is the Bellefonte Fossil Ore Company, composed of Daniel Garman, William Hart and ex-Sheriff W. Miles Walker. Their territory of operations in the ore business is on Muncy mountain, south of the Thomas estate.

—We say to the National Guard—stay at home don't go to New York city. New York invited you and now condemns you for accepting the invitation. If any one should invite us to go to see them and then should tell us to bring our dinner along, we would not again visit that place.

—Mr. Thomas Moore, one of Bellefonte's good-looking and bright young men, was married on Thursday evening to Miss Sallie Dawson, a popular and agreeable young lady. The happy affair took place at the home of the bride's father, Mr. William Dawson, on Willow Bank street. Congratulations.

—An incendiary fire occurred in Altoona at 10 oclock Wednesday morning. Edwin B Thompson's house at the corner of Third avenue and Sixteenth street was destroyed, loss $1200, and a house owned by W. L. Woodcock was damaged to the extent of $600. There was another fire (the destruction of a stable) at 5 o'clock the previous afternoon.

—The company which surprised Mr. Isaac Frain at his house on Wednesday evening was the class of which he is the leader in the Methodist church. He is greatly respected by the class. After the meeting at that time some of the members detained him at the church, while they went to his house and invaded it to the number of about sixty. The evening was spent most pleasantly.

FLYING THROUGH SPACE.

AND NOTING PERSONS AND EVENTS ON THE EARTH.

MILESBURG, Monday, 5 p. m.

Editor Bellefonte Daily News: I was out for a drive this afternoon with Mr. L. C. Bullock, one of Milesburg's best citizens. He went at a two-thirty pace on the road and drove his horse from Milesburg to Curtins Furnace, a distance of three and a half miles, in thirteen minutes. Mr. Curg Lingle with his steed hitched to a sulky met us and we had a little chase.

Mr. Clate Poorman is giving his property a treat to a new roof, new fence and a fresh coat of paint.

Mr. J. Willis Weaver is now located in his own house, No. 26 Main street.

At Curtins Furnace we met Mr. Walker, the boss of the store. Walker is married to one of the Misses Holter. He is a very sociable fellow. The men were loading ore. I walked over to them and talked for a while with them, finding them to be all uniformly agreeable.

I spent my life for the last nine years at the employ of Whitead & Bacon, and I have always had satisfactory work, and in the nine years never lost or was docked a cent. Now I am off for three weeks. I came to my old northern home on the 2d of April, about noon, and everyone treated me so cleverly and kindly that I am getting recruited up in good shape. I take a nap every afternoon and when I get up there is always awaiting me a dish of oysters, a saucer of ice cream or a quarter section of delicious pie, for which I am under obligations to my loving sister, Julia Morris.

Mr. T. S. Morris, the assessor, is about through with his assessments. One of the very best young gentlemen in this town is Mr. Enoch Clayton Poorman, and when he comes out driving his Maud S and a fair lady at his side all lesser glories are bound to vanish, Mr. Harry Bouse, another representative young gentleman of this part of the old Keystone, is learning the drug business with C. H. Else. Mr. Else is one of many whom we number among our very choice citizens of whom we can be proud. Then there Mr. L. T. Eddy, who is fairly idolized by the people of Milesburg. When you want to hear good singing go to the M. E. church when Lyman leads the singing. When Mr. Eddy sings "Is my name written there?" it produces a profound impression.

Mr. and Mrs W. B. Miles are two more of our cultured people and there is no more courteous individual in business in this county than their son, Oscar E. Miles. Mr. L. C. Bullock can be seen every evening driving at a 2.40 rate and a little black-eyed Miss at his side. Central City produces another affable citizen in the person of Mr. Boyd Stonerode. In brief, this community has a desirable society. Misses Emma Steaven and Clara White are among our popular and attractive young ladies.

Mrs. Susie Thomas is here on a visit with her husband, Dr. Thomas, of Philadelphia. The fellow who is penning these lives was one of her scholars twenty winters ago.

Yours truly,

W. C. MORRIS.

Howard Excited.

Mr. Tom Moore starts for Montana on the 23d inst.

Herdic Counsel's family moved to Altoona this week.

Mr. James Heaton has rented the Antes farm.

Miss Mittie Lucas and Mrs. Anna Conly, of Bellefonte, are visiting friends here.

Prohibitionist Will Weber says that the anti-prohibitionists are gaining converts here.

Henry Smith's suit against the Rudolph Pletcher estate resulted in a judgment of $75 in favor of Smith.

James Lucas visited Woodland, last week. Matters must look well out there as James returned home in fine spirits.

People from this place visiting Lock Haven return with a shoe box under their arm, in which is a bottle of the ardent instead of shoes.

There appears to be considerable carousing on our streets at times, and your correspondent is informed that several gallons of beer and whiskey are brought here by individuals every week.

The Swarts-Long suit is the exciting topic of conversation here and when that lags the prospective appointment of a lady postmistress is taken up for discussion.

Mr. James Miller, a former resident of this place, and a telegraph operator, died of consumption, at Tyrone, on the 12th inst. On last Monday, the 15th inst., his body was brought to this place and interred in our cemetery. His remains were accompanied by his brother Irvin Miller, of Renovo, Wm. Young and wife of Tyrone, and many other citizens of the latter place were in attendance. The funeral was a large one, the Rev. Geo. King officiating. The following citizens of this place were the pall bearers, A. A. Schenick, Walter Cooke, Will Weber, John Weber, Will Lucas and Frank Smith. The early home of the deceased was in this place and he has many warm friends here and was highly respected by all.

—In the case of the death of Charles Shoffner, who was killed at Grazier's bridge on last Sunday, the Coroners jury rendered the following: verdict "That they, the jury, do upon their solemn oaths and affirmation, respectively say, that it appears from the evidence before us, that his death was caused by being struck by overhead bridge at Grazier's while in the discharge of his duties as a brakeman on third Altoona extra freight train, engine 895.

—Renovo is having a happy time on the subject of its schools. A boy attending the schools committed an unruly act and was expelled by Principal Rank. The boy's guardians appealed to the school Board, who decided to reinstate the lad if he would make an apology. This caused the Principal to resign. His resignation was accepted. Another meeting of the Board has been held which received many petitions from citizens to re-elect Principal Rank. At the same meeting, Mr. Rank, who seems to be quite an independent individual, made a speech, in which he went for the School Board in a lively manner, telling them that they were led around by the nose by one of their number (Mr. Sheldon.) The Renovo News says: "Twas an awful speech, replete with awful charges and he was allowed to go through it without a break from any of the directors." The Principal has not been re elected and probably will not be.

Surveying a Railroad Line.

There is now at the Fountain House a party of surveyors who are surveying the line of what will be known as the Midland Railway. It is exceedingly probable that the line will pass through this place, coming from Watsontown up White Deer Valley to Washington Furnace and Hublersburg to Bellefonte, and thence on to Chicago, between the 41s and 42d degrees of Latitude.

There is some talk of a route along by Marsh Creek, which was surveyed long ago. Business men in Bellefonte however, are confident that it will pass through this place, which we hope will be the case, as it will be of inestimable benefit to have a competing line of railroad.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years Doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F J Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucus surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F J Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

—Philipsburg Ledger:—Mr. Frank E. Bible, Atty-at-Law, has arrived in town, bag and baggage, with the intention of becoming a citizen. He has his office in Gray's building, Presqueisle street side, upstairs, in the room formerly occupied by Atty. Litchenthaler. We believe Philipsburg people will like Mr. Bible. He is a qualified attorney, and his six years experience as Recorder, of Centre county, gives him a knowledge of the records and dockets of the county, that will be of great service to him and his clients, especially in the line of conveyancing. We welcome him to town, and hope he may find the venture a profitable one.

—This item in the Altoona Tribune relates to Martinsburg in Blair county. It is as follows: We are pleased to learn that the people of Martinsburg are now a great deal better off than they have been for a long time, all from the good results of no license. They now have two good hotels for the accommodation of the traveling public. The new house opened by Mr. Bookhamer will be a first class place to stop, and we know that the accomodations at the Hagey house are very good from our own knowledge. So soon are the people of Martinsburg realizing the glorious benefits of the workers of temperance.

—Mr. William H. Neff, the undertaker at Howard, is one of the most proficient men in that business in this county. He has had long experience and has natural tact in this difficult work. Mr. Neff is always called on in the sad emergencies which make an undertaker's work necessary. He is also prepared to furnish the supplies necessary on such occasions in every style. As a consequence, he is very prosperous and being an excellent citizen all others rejoice in his good fortune.

—Good Friday, the Friday before Easter, is sacred as the occasion for the commemoration of the crucifixion of Christ. From a very early day this has been kept as a day of mourning and special prayer. In the Roman Catholic church impressive ceremonies take place on that day. It is also celebrated in the English church and the American Episcopal church with special solemnity. In England and Ireland the day is by law a dies non, and all business is suspended.

MERRY MILESBURG.

ONLY THREE APPLICANTS FOR THE POST-OFFICE—EVENTS OF ALL DESCRIPTIONS.

Iron ore has been discovered on J. Miles Green's land, and the prospecters are now hunting for the main vein.

All the mason work has been completed on the weigh scales at this place and in a few weeks they will be ready for use.

The first house in Milesburg was on the present site of Mr. John Hiblers store, and we might state that through the generosity of Mr. Hibler the writer became the owner of a Treatise on Medicine as used by the London school of Physic one hundred years ago.

Mr. Solomon Confer, our undertaker, has moved his establishment from its former position near the Presbyterian parsonage across a lot to the residence of Mrs. Like.

The new Presbyterian church is to be erected on the former side of Mr. Confer's shop.

Mr. Holmes, who last summer sold his store at this place to Mr. Hugg and started a grocery in Philipsburg, has returned and opened a general merchandise store.

There are but three applicants for the Post-Office at this place. The query is who will get it?

Mr. Beezer's butcher shop at this place is a success and a long felt want is supplied.

Miss Mabel Smith is visiting relatives in Williamsport.

Miss Amelia Martin teacher of the second grade in the public school is lying very sick.

Mr. C. K. Essington, Sr., is lying very sick at his home with cancer.

E. Clayton Poorman is just getting there in fine style. He has had his house roofed, painted and a new fence put up. What does all this mean 'Clate?'

Mr. Joseph Liviers, who lately broke his leg, is getting along well under the skillful treatment of Dr. Church. Dr. Church has been here but one year and in that time has built up quite an extensive practice.

The iron ore taken from Kitchen's farm on the Thomas estate about one mile from this place, finds a ready sale.

Mr. James Proudfoot is erecting a carpenter shop on Main street near the iron bridge.

Mr. H. I. Bouse is again able to be about.

Miss Lyda Taylor is finishing the remaining six days of Miss Amelia Martin's school.

Constitutional Amendment seems to have taken a firm hold here.

Mr. J. B. Miles has just returned from Philadelphia with a complete line of new goods.

Undeservedly Laughed At.

The unthinking are prone to make game of nervousness. Yet this is a very real and serious affliction, the harassing symptoms of which are rendered all the more poignant by ridicule. The stomach is usually responsible for these symptoms—its weakness and disorder find a reflex in the brain, which is the headquarters of the nervous system. As a nerve tonic and tranquilizer, we believe that not one can be pointed out so effective as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. In renewing vigorous digestion, it strikes the key note of recovery of strength and quietude by the nerves. Headaches, tremors in quiet sleep, abnormal sensitiveness to unexpected noises—all these modify and ultimately disappear as the system gains strength from the great tonic. Dyspepsia, biliousness, rheumatism, constipation and kidney complaints are subdued by the Bitters.

The Greatest Alchemist.

The most wonderful alchemist in the world is the one now at work, and is creating such remarkable results without being in the least understood. Some element contained in the earth which is of a character that you dont want it to touch your polished boot is united with other elements in the air and with sunshine and lovely effects are produced. The deep green of the grass is thus created, it also paints the delicate tints of the flowers—more varying shades than there are different species of flowers. Isnt it wonderful! All produced as it is by the same elements. In comparison with this how the alchmeists which science has produced pale into insignificance. Look at the results about you and study the alchemy of nature. What wonders there are for science to investigate! Talk of science not being in accord with revelation—how do we know whether it is or not when our science does not reach even to the beginning of the science put in operation by the author of Revelation. In fact, with all our wisdom we seem to know nothing.

A Woman's Discovery.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made and that too by a lady of this county. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. Kings New Discovery for Consumption and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs Luther Lutz." Thus write W. C. Hamrick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. —Get a free trial bottle at W. C. Keplinger & Co's. Drug Store.

—A man whose name is supposed to be W A Jacobs, a son in law of R F Hazel, of Spruce Creek, was found dead near Tyrone on Wednesday afternoon. The man was recently agent for Thomas K Henderson at Morrell. The Tyrone Daily Herald says there is not much doubt but that the man was temporarily out of his mind and that he wandered off to where he was found and being exhausted laid down to die.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt, in German, French or English with full directions for preparing and using. NEW STYLE PLEASANT TASTE

The Most Perfect Medical Preparation of the Age.

The New Style Vinegar Bitters

Is of a clear, dark reddish amber color. It has a delicious taste. It is a most invigorating tonic. It is a gentle and painless, but thorough cathartic It contains no opium. It contains no poison or hurtful drug of any sort.

New Style Vinegar Bitters purifies the blood, beautifies the complexion, strengthens the nerves, muscles and brain, drives away malaria, and keeps the system so strong as to enable it to repel infectious diseases and epidemics generally.

The organs of the body most given to shirking their regular work are the stomach, bowels, liver and kidneys. A medicine that stimulates these organs into healthy action without causing pain, is invaluable.

New Style Vinegar Bitters does this, and it does the work permanently. It never robs Peter to pay Paul, as alcoholic and other (so-called) remedies do. It is a most grateful, healing medicine to all who are troubled with piles, for it relieves at once, and soon cures this most painful disorder.

It aids digestion, cures constipation, headache, billious complaints, feverishness, neuralgia, nervous diseases of every sort, and every class of skin disease known.

As a Family Medicine, for the use of ladies, children and men of sedentary habits, the New Style Vinegar Bitters has no equal in the world. It is invaluable for curing the ills that beset childhood, and gently regulates the diseases to which women at every period of life are subject.

Ladies, get a bottle from your druggist and try it. If your druggist has not the New Style Vinegar Bitters, ask him to send for it. If you once try it you will never be without this priceless remedy in the house.

VINEGAR BITTERS.

The only Temperance Bitters known

It stimulates the brain and quiets the Nerves, regulates the Bowels and renders a perfect blood circulation through the human veins, which is sure to restore perfect health.

GEO W DAVIS of 169 Baronne St., New Orleans La., writes under date May 26, 1888, as follows: "I have been going to the Hot Springs, Ark., for fifteen years for an itching humor in my blood. I have just used three bottles of Vinegar Bitters, and it has done me more good than the Springs. It is the best medicine made."

JOSEPH J EAGAN, No. 75 West St., New York, says: "Have not been without Vinegar Bitters for the past twelve years, and consider it a whole medicine chest in our family."

MRS. MATTIE FURGUSON, Dryden, N Y, says: "Vinegar Bitters is the best medicine I ever tried; it saved my life."

T F BAILEY, of Hamboldt, Iowa, says: "Vinegar Bitters cured me of paralysis ten years ago, and recently it cured me of rheumatism."

MRS WM A DAVIS, of Camden, N J, says: "I have suffered greatly from indigestion and bowel troubles, and Vinegar Bitters gave me great relief

JAMES H DWYER, of Worster, Mass., writes "I always use Vinegar Bitters as a spring medicine, and have the best of health."

L COLEMAN, of 77 Montgomery St., New York, writes: "I find your Vinegar Bitters a first-class tonic."

Local Department.

—Oh! sweet the days are
When woodland ways are
Melodious with the song birds' lays,
And flowers are blooming,
The air perfuming,
And there's genial warmth in the solar rays!

But though warm's the weather
For days together
The spring is fickle as sages say,
And, to keep from coughing,
We won't be doffing
Our heavy flannels at least till May.

—House cleaning is about ended.

—Have you heard "razzle dazzle?"

—The picnic season will soon be here.

—One cent postage is very much desired.

—How many eggs did you eat on Sunday?

—Barnum's great show will be in Williamsport on May 10.

—Flowers are blooming in a way that beautifies many yards.

—The yellow dandelion causes the average lawn to gleam like gold.

—The straw hat is coming to the front.—Tyrone Daily Herald. Yes, it's always bound to come out (on) ahead.

—Now it is reported that the new passenger train will be put on the Bald Eagle Valley railroad on or about May 13

—Monday morning—the day after Easter—the Episcopal congregation elected a vestry to serve during the year just commenced.

—The young men's orchestra will render music at the Y. M. C. A. meeting next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Everybody is invited.

—The supper served on Monday evening in Y. M. C. A. hall was very fine and was highly creditable to the Methodist ladies who prepared the feast and presided over the tables.

—The moon changed into its last quarter at 8.18 o'clock Monday morning. This change indicates that the weather will be variable, which means part pleasant and part disagreeable.

—We have received No. 1 of Vol. 1 of the Weekly Tribune, published at Houston, Texas. It is Republican in politics and advocates protective tariff and consequently will have a career of usefulness.

—Shaved heads among the sterner sex are common and when the owner of the shaved head also wears a fashionable barred suit he can easily be mistaken for a recent graduate from the penitentiary.

—An infant child of Mr. and Mrs. David Bartley, of Willow Bank street, died on Sunday night and was buried on Tuesday at 2 o'clock p. m We sympathise with the parents and family in the death of their little one.

—Francis Speer is every day the hero of some wonderful adventure, but they have recently been of such a character as to induce him to earnestly request us not to "give him away," and as he promises to reform we will be lenient with him for a while at least.

Mr. Arthur Brown just came home from New York city, where he was attending to business relating to the Victor Radiator Company. He found everything very encouraging and is daily in receipt of letters from all parts of the country inquiring about the radiators.

—Mr. Arthur Brown says that he don't know how New York city will accommodate any larger crowds than she has now. He found the narrow streets of that city thronged already and the people there are not to be envied by the time 500,000 more swoop down upon them on April 30.

—The electrical course as taught at the State College is considered to be as excellent as that of any institution in this country. This is important as more rapid progress is now being made in developing and utilizing the power of electricity than ever before. Many have already reaped the benefit of it.

—Mr. A. L. Miller will conduct the Y. M. C. A. meeting next Sunday afternoon. It will be his last Sunday here previous to going to Altoona to begin his ministerial labor. The meeting will be public, everyone being invited. This will afford the ladies opportunity to see the new audience hall. It is also expected that the Young Men's Orchestra will be present.

—A fresh illustration was given on Monday of the way in which people love to be humbugged. A traveling man selling five rings in packages which might possibly contain money induced several persons to purchase the packages. He made considerable money out of a crowd which did not seem to be worth a dollar all told. The people who were deceived took it with very good humor.

—The senatorial committee of the State Legislature visited the State College last week. Among them were some of the same gentlemen who visited the institution on a former occasion. They were favorably impressed the first time and the result was an appropriation. On their recent visit the impression was yet more favorable as they noted the improvement and progress made and it is confidently expected that there will be another appropriation, which we hope will be the result.

THE QUEEN OF FESTIVALS.

Appropriate Observances of the Anniversary of the Resurrection.

There are no more beautiful ceremonials or affecting traditions associated with any event—Christian, heathen or civil—then with Easter. Christ is risen and become the first fruits of them that slept. All nature in her most beautiful manifestations symbolizes forth this wonderful truth. The seed is not cast into the ground except it decay and springing forth bringeth food to the sower.

Every sombre thought must be chased away by Easter. Gladness must mark the memorial. Flowers are the symbols at once of new life and of our joy. In all their perfect beauty they were brought into the churches of this place and made glad the places of worship on a very beautiful Easter day. In the Episcopal church there were delicate vines, clustering flowers and blooming plants upon and above the altar, and in the chancel. Fashioned by deft fingers into appropriate devices they were placed on pedestals about the front of the chancel and church. The cross and crown was a lovely creation; there was a half moon in bright colors, in the centre of which was a star in white. A mass of pure white calla lillies symbolized purity. There were other noticeable single pieces and in every window were collections of potted plants.

The music rendered by the vested choir was appropriate to the event. There were two administrations of the Eucharist during the morning. Services both morning and evening were attended by largely augmented congregations.

In the Roman Catholic church the services were as usual imposing with the most elaborate music and tasteful floral decorations.

JESUS, THE RESURRECTION AND THE LIFE.

Rev. W. L. Hayden preached an appropriate Easter sermon from Jno. 11.25, 26. He said Jesus declared that "I am the resurrection and the Life." Such he is to all that believe on him.

This is a startling announcement and rests on his assumption of divine power. He claimed to quicken whom he will as his Father raises up the dead and quickens whom he will. This claim challenges the acceptance of men and taxes their credulity. It is not strange that men who do not believe in the divine Sonship of Jesus, scoff at such a wonderful declaration. The human mind stoutly refuses to accept such an utterance from any mere man however great and good. Rational faith demands the clearest proof, before it can yield assent to a proposition of that character. Jesus could vindicate his right to use these words only by a demonstration of his power to bring the dead from the grave. One well attested instance, like the resurrection of Lazarus who was four days dead and undergoing decomposition, fully justifies the unprecedented claim. The fact of the incarnation of Deity in the person of the Son of man involves all needful exercise of deific powers. The argument from the raising of Lazarus is brief and conclusive. God only can give life to the dead, Jesus gave life to one known to be dead and in the grave. Therefore, Jesus is divine.

The fact was not denied by the Jews, but they sought the more to kill him because of it.

The resurrection relates to the bringing of the body from the grave as in the cases of Lazarus and Jesus himself. There is a spiritual resurrection that takes place in the regeneration of the believer, but the term usually refers to raising the body from corruption, weakness and dishonor, an animal body, to incorruption, power and glory, a spiritual body. This implies two facts, viz., the survival of the Spirit after death and the resurrection of the body after its decomposition. Saducean materialism denies the former and Swedenborgian mysticism denies the latter. Christianity affirms both and makes a resurrection possible. It becomes actual through the power of Christ.

The life relates to a higher thought. It is not a mere existence nor even conscious existence. Matter exists without life and life exists as in vegetation without consciousness. Living men are dead in sins. The life which Christ gives is the joy which springs from the knowledge of God and Jesus Christ whom he has sent.

Its condition is a vital union with Christ through an abiding faith in him. "Whosoever liveth and believeth in him shall never die, never lose the blessedness of divine presence.

To the believer death is robbed of its terror. It is the moving time, the leaving of a temporal tabernacle and going home to the eternal mansions in the heavens.

—The Tyrone correspondent of the Altoona Times was dreadfully distressed last week merely because we called attention to one of his many grammatical inaccuracies. Since then he has visited upon us the vials of his wrathful indignation. He is very foolish, however, to be so sensitive, particularly when he reflects that he lays himself open to such criticism in every line of his letters. We might devote all of our attention to him and then not criticise all, but do not consider the game worth the powder. And then to do so might result in a discontinuance of his letters which would deprive this part of the State of a decidedly unique and amusing specimen of journalistic correspondence.

Death of a Beloved Minister of the Gospel.

On Saturday, at noon, Rev. W. H. H. Snyder, pastor of the Reformed congregation of this place, died at Atlantic City, N. J., whither he had gone to recruit his feeble health. His wife had been with him there during his stay. At first, we are told, he rapidly improved. By exposure he contracted a severe cold which developed into pneumonia with the very sad result stated. He was 53 years of age.

His daughter and son—Miss Mary and Master Paul—were summoned on Saturday to go to Lancaster, whither the remains were taken. Col. D. S. Keller accompanied them to that city, where the funeral was held.

Rev. Mr. Snyder had been the pastor here only a few years. He came here from Harrisburg where he had been for twenty-two years. He was a gentleman of high education, bright talents and winning disposition. His health had been delicate for many years. He was blessed with a lovely wife and family and his home was a scene of perfect happiness and comfort. That it is thus rudely severed by death is an afflictive Providence too sad to contemplate except through scalding tears. May the God of the widow and fatherless have mercy!

This event made Easter a sad day in the Reformed congregation.

Laid to Rest.

A high wind was all that disturbed the great beauty of Easter Sunday. It blew the dust before it and cooled the air. Vast throngs of people attended the funeral services at the house of Mrs. Pugh, held in respect to the memory of Mr. Bond Valentine. The house was filled and scores of gentlemen awaited outside the house. The services were all conducted by Miss Mary Snowden Thomas, a talented member of the Friends Society and residing in Baltimore. She prayed earnestly and affectingly and spoke in a clear, penetrating voice and in eloquent, pleading language—dwelling on the designs and purposes of God, the free gift of His Son, his ability and willingness to save, the utter loneliness of life without God, and the grief we should feel for every failure to obey God's commands. Nearly all the people followed the body to the grave and saw it committed dust to dust. Bond Valentine died on Good Friday; his funeral was on Easter. There is everything in the facts which those two events commemorate to console mourning friends.

The pall bearers were: William P. Humes, F. W. Crider, A. J. Cook, John Powers, William Shortlidge, John P. Harris, Clement Dale, Esq., and Charles McCafferty.

Peculiar to Easter.

They were abroad in the land on Sunday, because it was a pleasant day and the day set apart for the donning of new apparel. The flowers of the field in all their pristine glory were not arrayed like one of these. They were creatures beautiful to behold and a joyful subject of contemplation forever.

Their hats were a bower of flowers of all kinds—roses, daisies and others less common. Their dresses were a symphony of shirred fronts and slashed backs; of new and taking combinations of colors. As nature's first flowers of spring were not gorgeous enough for them they added flora of the imitation sort and made the air delicious with their fragrance. Even the young men laid all the freshest flowers under contribution to their love for the beautiful and were veritable Sweet Williams with their button hole bouquets.

Not only did people dress, but they also eat several times their ordinary quantity of eggs. The hens, which had just contemplated going on a long strike caused by over production, held a meeting and resolved to continue work at the old place. Their products were eagerly sought after and added to the enjoyment of this great day.

Beer for the Huns.

On Saturday evening there arrived per Adams Express thirty-six kegs of beer for the Huns of this vicinity. It is not often that Manager Tripple and Assistant Hutchinson receive such valuable packages and they did not like to part with the goods by giving them to their proper owners. Dozens of anti-Amendment people looked anxiously at the beer kegs as if they would like to make a raid on them. But the Prohibitionists were inclined to pitch the whole 36 kegs into the waters of Spring creek.

If the Huns got onto the outside of a large proportion of this beer on Saturday evening they likely had a very interesting and lively time.

—The suite of four large rooms occupied by Orvis, Bower & Orvis are very attractive and elegant. They are located at the southern end of the Crider Exchange building and are beautifully furnished. A flood of light enters the two front rooms through the large windows, throwing into bold relief those two good looking law students, William Singer and James Noll. The rooms will afford this substantial and strong law firm the best possible facilities to carry on their extensive business.

ROYALLY ENTERTAINED.

THE VESTRY AND CHOIR OF THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH ENTERTAINED BY THE LADIES GUILD.

The Sunday school room of the Episcopal church never presented a more brilliant and inviting appearance than on Monday evening. Flowers and fruit can transform any apartment into a place of loveliness, and they were present in boundless profusion on this occasion.

But first as to the circumstances of the affair. The Ladies Guild of the church gave this entertainment to the choristers and the vestry and were kind enough to send for our reporter to also enjoy the bountiful feast and the varied attractions of the occasion.

Potted plants, including some rare specimens noticeable for their artistic foliage and bright hued flowers, were banked against the east side of the room. The table was ornamented with bouquets of brilliant flowers, among which one large vessel filled with handsome Bermuda lillies was particularly admirable and fragrant. The fruits, too, were formed into pyramids and added to the effect while the cakes themselves were so ornamental and beautiful as to attract admiring comment to them.

Before refreshments were served all kinds of games and animated conversation were indulged in. The games and puzzles included the latest novelties, not excepting the "Pigs in Clover" and were intensely amusing.

Of the refreshments, the cakes and the ices were particularly delicious, while the fruits added their tempting qualities, coffee crowning the bill-of-fare.

After refreshments there was music, and as nearly all present were singers, the music was really excellent. It was easy to see that everybody heartily enjoyed the delightful reception.

The New York Centennial—Half Rates via Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Centennial celebration of the inauguration of General Washington as first President of the United States will undoubtedly prove the grandest demonstration ever seen in New York. On the morning of April 29th the great naval parade, composed of over six hundred vessels, will occur, in the evening the Centennial Ball, and on the 30th the religious and literary exercises in the morning will be followed by the most imposing and extensive military parade ever seen in this country. The banquet will be held in the evening, and on May 1st will occur the great civil and industrial parade. The three days will be filled with a multitude of scenes and incidents of absorbing interest. In order to place the trip within the power of every one the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will sell excursion tickets from Pittsburgh to New York on April 27th, 28th, 29th, and 30th, for trains scheduled to arrive in New York before noon of May 1st, at $13.32. These tickets will be accepted for passage on all trains except the New York and Chicago Limited Express, and will be valid for return until and including May 6th, 1889.

A Word in Season.

The barking of a pack of hounds may be music, but the barking of the human family is certainly discord. Stop that cough with Humphreys' Specific No. Seven. N. Y. "SPORTSMAN." Humphreys' Specific No. Seven possesses true merit. Nothing that we have ever tried in our family equals it for coughs, colds and sore throats.—Cresco, Ia., Plain Dealer.

By our exchanges we observe that similar reports are appearing in every part of the country, and having found Specifics Nos. One and Seven of priceless value in our own family, we deem the above a "word in season" to our friends and readers.—Mobile Ala. Blade.

Death of Mother Kreamer.

Mrs. Catharine Kreamer, usually known as "Mother Kreamer" one of the most aged residents of Milesburg, died on Sunday at the home of her daughter, Sarah McKinley. Her age was 94 years and 16 days. She lacked only a few years of rounding out the century. Her former home was in Millheim and she was taken to that place last summer at the time of the anniversary ceremonies, enjoying the event and being herself of much interest in that connection. She was highly respected and was a consistent Christian.

—One of the most interesting natural curiosities of Lycoming county, Pennsylvania, is situated in Rose valley about six miles from Trout run. It consists of seven natural wells extending almost straight downward to depth unknown. Large stones cast in some of these wells go rumbling down, making a coarse, rasping sound at first as they strike against the sides of the well, growing fainter and fainter until lost by the distance. Near these wells is a cave, the mouth of which is large enough for a horse to enter. Several gangways lead off from the main entrance to large, separate chambers, and from these other passage ways lead off probably to unexplored chambers.

—The telegraph tells us this morning that, the Prohibitory Amendment was defeated in Massachusetts on Monday by a majority against it of 35,000 to 40,000. That should not be discouraging to Pennsylvania Prohibitionists, but should rather inspire them to work harder as the prize to be attained is very great. With work on the part of Prohibitionists this state will roll up a majority of 100,000 for the Amendment; without work the majority will be the other way. Then work from now until June 18.

Personal Pencilings.

Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Barron, of Altoona spent Sunday in Bellefonte.

Samuel Hess, of Pine Grove Mills, recently celebrated his 91st birthday.

Miss Marion Ager, of Lock Haven, is spending several days in Bellefonte.

S. D. Gettig, of near Centre Hall, is reading law in Dist. Atty. Meyer's office.

We have noticed Mr. Jack McLellan of Altoona in Bellefonte for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gilmour, of Tyrone, paid a visit to friends in Bellefonte on Friday.

We notice the presence home of Mr. Thomas Mitchell, who is a student at Haverford College.

John P. Harris, Jr., spent last week at the home of his sister, Mrs. A. B. Weaver, in Clearfield.

Miss Emma Aikens departed on Monday evening for Birmingham to resume her attendance at school.

Oscar Holt took in Bellefonte on last Monday, it being almost a year since he had seen this place before.

Burnside township's popular constable, Mr. Thomas Bechtol, was among the pleasant callers at this office on Monday last.

Mrs. Mollie Payne, formerly Miss Mollie Long, of this place, but now of Roanoke, Va., is visiting at the home of her parents.

Dr. A W Hafer always decorates his west-end office window with the freshest flowers of spring in their most gorgeous coloring.

Mr. William Jones placed his straw hat under the steam heat raidiator on Sunday night and thus prevented it from freezing.

Mr. Will Bartley, of State College, was called home by the death of his baby brother, the funeral occurring this afternoon.

Mr. Eyler, the State Agent for the People's Insurance Company of Pittsburg, attended Mr. Bond Valentine's funeral on Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Thomas R. Reynolds and her sister, Miss Sue Jack, have returned from Washington city, and are located in their new home on Allegheny street.

Miss Maggie Sechler, daughter of Mr. Hammon Sechler, who has been at school in Chambersburg all winter, is spending her Easter vacation at home.

We hear that John I. Rankin, Jr., has has received an appointment in Washington City as 6th Deputy Collector in one of the departments at an annual salary of $2200.

Mr. Morris E. Swartz, son of Dr. Swartz, is now in Bellefonte a guest at the home of Mr. C. T. Gerberich. He is a student at Dickinson College and will graduate this year, this being his Easter vacation.

Mrs. Fortney, wife of D. F. Fortney, Esq., accompanied by her son, Master Paul Fortney, departed on Wednesday for Warren, Warren county, Pa., to visit her brother, Mr. William C. Huey, who is quite ill.

Mr. Andrew Cruse, son of Mr. A. J. Cruse of this place, has received the cadet appointment to Anapolis Naval Academy. It is an appointment which is considered a very great prize, and we congratulate Andrew on securing it.

J. W. Gephart, Esq., Governor Beaver's law partner, will go to London, England, during the approaching June as a delegate to the World's Young Men's Christian Association Convention to be held in the World's Metropolis at that time.

Mr. William B. Mitchell, son of our excellent friend Mr. J. D. Mitchell returned home on Friday evening from California. Mr. Mitchell has been railroading in that State during the two past years, but reports that the opportunities are just as favorable in the East, and will hereafter remain here.

—The court room was comfortably filled on Monday evening to hear Dr. Moorhead, of Greensburg, Westmoreland county, on the subject of Constitutional Prohibition. Rev. W. L. Hayden made an opening prayer, a large and excellent choir sang very finely and Rev. W. A. Houck introduced the lecturer. He rather frightened the audience at first by beginning to read from a pile of manuscript an inch thick. His voice is not good, breaking and becoming thin in the upper register. The first part of his lecture was argumentative and strong. He wisely introduced humor in the latter part of his lecture and it was of a very striking, pointed and "taking" kind, keeping the male part of the audience in constant laughter, while the ladies could not repress frequent broad smiles. The most pointed portion of his remarks consisted in strong analagries or comparisons between temperance and intemperance, high license and prohibition and a terrible scoring of the "babbling Brooks" of high license fame and his bill, which he said is the ne plus ultra of whiskey legislation.

THE LATE REV. W. H. H. SNYDER.

HIS PROMINENT AND USEFUL CAREER IN CONNECTION WITH THE REFORMED CHURCH.

In the death of Rev. W. H. H. Snyder the Reformed church lost from its roll of ministers one who had been more than ordinarily prominent in all its counsels and whose influence was quite extended. He was a graduate of Franklin and Marshall College of Lancaster and of the Theological Seminary, then located at Mercersburg, but now also in Lancaster.

His first charge as a pastor was in Akron, Ohio. He was called to Salem Reformed church in Harrisburg, where he labored a period of twenty-two years. He found the congregation weak and in a very unsatisfactory condition spiritually. When he left it Salem Reformed congregation was known to be the most prosperous and powerful in this part of Pennsylvania.

His health was extremely feeble which impelled him to leave his excellent congregation in Harrisburg and come to Bellefonte where his labor was heavier and his salary lighter, but where he hoped to recruit his health. He took charge of the congregation here in December, 1886. His health gradually improved until he considered that he was able to endure exposure, which however caused him to contract a cold. Pneumonia followed and his death was the sad result, occurring on Saturday at Atlantic City.

During fifteen years he was a member of the Board of Home Missions. During part of that time he was a member of the Executive Counsel and Secretary to the Board. When overtaken by death he was a member of the committee appointed to revise the constitution of the church, which will miss his wise counsel and direction.

He was held in high esteem here, not only by his congregation but also by the people of the town. We fail to remember a movement for good undertaken in Bellefonte into which he did not enter heartily. He was wisely and intelligently a champion of Prohibition and in one of his recent sermons he advocated the organization of a gymnasium for young men in connection with the Y M C A. His sermons were models of literary excellence, of which the discourse delivered at the union service last Thanksgiving day and which was published almost in full in this paper was a fair specimen.

His wife, his daughter, Miss Mary, and a son, Paul, survive him. The remains were taken to Lancaster, where the funeral services took place at 2.30 on Thursday. Col. D S Keller and Mr. Jared Harper, members of the church here, were in attendance. If the necessary arrangements can be made memorial services will be held in the Reformed church here on Sunday, May 5,

Pennsylvania Day at Gettysburg.

The circulars relative to the dedication of the monuments on the battlefield of Gettysburg, on the 21st and 22d of May, are signed by Maj. Samuel Harper, secretary to the commissioners. They state that the first day (the 21st) will be devoted to such exercises at the monuments as the respective survivors' organization may desire, but including an address relating to the services of the regiment or battery in the battle. Afterwards, if the Legislature will make the necessary appropriation, the addresses will be collected and published in one volume, thus giving a complete history of Pennsylvania in the Battle of Gettysburg. The commissioners therefore enjoin the greatest care and accuracy in the preparation of the addresses.

On the second day the general exercises will take place and will soon be announced. The lowest possible rates will be procured on railroads and it is possible that the Legislature will make an appropration towards paying expenses. Let Pennsylvania Day be the greatest day at Gettysburg.

It Wasn't a Bear.

Our Curtin township correspondent sends us the following:

"A neighbor of ours, Mrs. B.—, thought she saw bear tracks under her hired girl's window, whereupon she set her husband's bear trap where the tracks were without saying anything to any one. Soon after she had retired that night she heard yells of pain and anguish. Upon investigating the cause, she found her husband hopping around on one leg with the bear trap hanging to the other. The next morning mutual explanations were in order, the result being the sending home of the hired girl."

Monument Dedication.

Capt. S. H. Williams has just been informed by J. M. Stoever, Secretary of the Regimental Association, that the monument of the 56th Pennsylvania Regiment will be dedicated on May 21 and 22, Pennsylvania's day at Gettysburg Gen. W. H. Hoffman will deliver the address. The State has appropriated funds to pay car fare. Official notices will be sent out soon. Capt. Williams will receive extra copies which he will distribute.

The popular blood purifier, Hood's Sarsaparilla is having a tremendous sale this season. Nearly everybody takes it. Try it yourself.
